$20 Family Allowances In Welfare Overhaul

OTTAWA (CP) — A rise in average family allowance payments to $20 a month per child has been proposed to the provinces in a federal government working paper tabled in the Commons today.

The proposal is part of an over-all model for an overhaul of the welfare system.

Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde is due to meet with his provincial counterparts next week for discussions on a general revamping of welfare plans.

The 14-point model presented by Lalonde also would make the allowances taxable.

Lalonde set the increase in family allowances and changes in the Canada Pension Plan as immediate priorities in the overhaul.

The increase in family allowances is expected to raise net costs of the plan by about $800 million a year, boosting present gross costs to $1.8 billion.

Among other proposals made by the government are:

An income supplement with built-in work incentives for working poor whose incomes are inadequate by reason of family size or by reason of their kind of employment.

A guaranteed income program for people who are unable to work or who are not expected to work, including the retired or disabled, single-parent families and persons who are not employable.

OLD AGE SECURITY

Acceptance of the old age security program as a base upon which a further guaranteed income plan can be built for the aged.

A last-resort income program to meet special situations of people who will not be covered under other income supplements.

A social and employment services plan to provide training, counselling and child-care needs.

Authority allowed the provinces to set their own levels of income guarantees and supplements and vary the amount of allowances paid under federal programs.

Establishment of a community services employment program.

That the approach to an overhaul of welfare programs be worked out within two years and a target date be set for implementation within three to five years.

The family allowance plan would be universal and is expected by the government to benefit all but those persons in high income levels.

The proposed plan represents a change from the ill-fated Family Income Security Plan introduced in the Commons last year.

That plan, which never received third reading due to the election call last summer, would have paid benefits graduated according to income.

Persons claiming the children as dependents will be expected to declare the payments as part of their income.

The government hopes after discussion with the provinces that the family allowance amendements can be implemented in January.

The working proposals offered by the government also favor full escalation of pension benefits under the Canada Pension Plan, with the escalation relating to the consumer price index.

Maximum pensionable earnings by 1975 will be increased to $7,800 if the federal proposals are accepted.

IT'S MEAT, IT'S BEANS ... IT'S SUPERBURGER!

OTTAWA (CP) — Superburger, a mixture of hamburger and soybean protein, was offered in a supermarket here Tuesday and sold well.

Composed of 75 per cent ground beef and 25 per cent soybean protein, the hybrid sold for 59 cents a pound compared with 83 cents a pound for regular hamburger.

A week ago, a health department spokesman said changes in the food regulations were being studied to permit the addition of plant protein to meat products.

This would bring Canadian rules in line with United States regulations, which were changed earlier this year.

Federal health officials launched an investigation into Tuesday's sales, and they issued a statement that they would take no action to stop the sale of superburger.

Regulations are being drafted to control labelling and nutritional content of such mixes.

Jean-Paul Joanisse, owner-manager of the store which was handling the new product, said it "was selling very well" and he tried it for supper Monday night. It tasted like hamburger, he said.

FIGHTING FLARES ACROSS VIETNAM

Times News Services

SAIGON — Fighting increased today in all four military regions of South Vietnam after a two-day lull, especially in the region surrounding Saigon.

North Vietnam claimed the air raids killed several civilians in Communist-controlled areas of the country.

In Cambodia, President Lon Nol announced the resignation of his entire cabinet Tuesday night in a move to "strengthen national unity."

But there was no sign of a let-up in fighting or U.S. bombing in the country.

Meanwhile, in Washington, a House subcommittee meeting in a closed session has voted to give President Nixon an additional $150 million to carry on the war in Indochina until June 30.

By JAMES ANDERSON
Times Correspondent

PHU BAI, South Vietnam "I didn't want to believe it but now I'm sure," says Capt. Ray Parsons. "The helicopters were off course."

Capt. Parsons was one of two Canadians who survived 10 days ago when two International Commission of Control and Supervision helicopters were shot down over Communist territory in sorthern South Vietnam.

Since the return of an ICCS investigating team from the area last week, Capt. Parsons has become absolutely convinced that the area examined and photographed by the team was the same place where he landed on April 7.

"They (the Viet Cong) let us take a few pictures of the crash," he said. "Just comparing the photographs yesterday, there's no question in my mind that it's the same location.

"They haven't moved anything or touched anything."

Canadian Capt. Charles Laviolette and eight others were killed when the first of two ICCS helicopters on the ICCS mission was destroyed by a Viet Cong missile.

Capt. Parsons and Master Cpl. Robert Laplante were aboard a second helicopter, which was hit by Communist fire but landed without injury to the 10 passengers and crewmen.

But American charter service pilots of the second helicopter have told the press they are certain they were on course.

Capt. Parsons was shielded from the press until he had given his evidence before the ICCS investigation team in Hue Monday.

I interviewed him Tuesday at Phu Bai, the ICCS sub-regional headquarters to which he is assigned, six miles south of Hue and 50 miles east of the crash site.

The captain dismissed news reports that the wreckage of the helicopter might have been moved. He said the evidence was so conclusive that he did not feel there was any need for the survivors to revisit the crash site.

His opinion, according to informed sources in Saigon, is supported by Canadian experts in photo-analysis, who have examined with great care the two sets of photographs taken by the survivors and the investigation team.

The same conclusion — that the helicopter was off course — was reached by all eight ICCS investigators when they went to the crash site last week.

The wreckage was located almost exactly where the Viet Cong said it was, some 15 miles from the air corridor through which the ICCS helicopters had been promised safe passage.

Some news reports from Saigon have quoted American sources as claiming they have evidence that the wreckage of the helicopters was moved. A senior American analyst who believes the story listed his evidence in Saigon.

It consisted of:

The presence in the general area of a Soviet-made MI-6 heavy-lift helicopter, large enough to have picked up the downed UH-1 "Huey" in which Parsons and the other survivors landed.

Air photos showing "a controlled ground fire" in the safe-passage corridor which the analyst believed was used to clear vegetation to allow collection of wreckage.

BCR Books Questioned

Outside auditors were restricted on how far they could go in auditing B.C. Railway books, the provincial comptroller-general has informed the government.

And J. W. Mintey urged an immediate stocktaking of operating materials and the follow-up on this and the matter of unclaimed payroll cheques.

Premier Barrett Tuesday filed Minty's report in the legislature which charged poor accounting and engineering practices under the former Social Credit government.

At the same time Barrett said that an outside engineering firm will be engaged "to review contract-letting practices" of the railway. Also, an outside accounting firm has been appointed to review problems raised in Minty's report.

When the two reports are completed, all material will be forwarded to the legislature's public accounts committee for review and study in the fall session.

Barrett also confirmed an earlier statement about division of responsibilities at the railway's top management level. Joe Broadbent is to continue as vice president of the railway and will supervise the railway's development aspects. Mac Norris is promoted to vice-president in charge of operations.

Barrett told the house that Minty's study of the railway's accounting procedures "leaves some unanswered questions." As a result, the railway's board of directors decided on the course of action it chose, he said. (Barrett is president of the BCR.)

In a covering letter to Barrett when his report was submitted, Minty said he and his staff had worked at the BCR's Vancouver offices during the first three weeks of March of this year.

"With respect to the awarding of contracts for rail line extensions, I confirm that the company's officials have seen fit to limit spending on preliminary engineering studies, a practice which has directly contributed to overruns in the order of $17 million on contracts completed to date," he wrote in the letter.

In the report, Minty specifies that Einar Gunderson, former Social Credit cabinet minister and executive vice-president of the railway, "restricted the extent to which the external auditors could go in their auditing with a consequent limitation of fees charged." He recommended that the auditors "should not be unduly restricted . . . as appeared to be the case in the past."

Among Minty's other recommendations:

Rail Car Factory For B.C.

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A rail car assembly shop creating almost 200 jobs will be constructed by the British Columbia Railway at Squamish and will begin operations in January, 1974, Premier Dave Barrett announced in the legislature Tuesday.

Barrett said $5 million has been allocated for the project.

At peak capacity, the plant will be able to produce four railway cars daily.

Barrett told reporters after he made the announcement in the house the steady demand for steel which will result from the car assembly plant will make it "feasible" for the government to consider a steel plant for British Columbia.

PARNTERNSHIP

He said the government is interested in a partnership with a private company for construction of a steel mill, and added that he will discuss such a project with European interests on his trip to Europe in May.

Barrett said a combination of factors led to the BCR's decision to build a rail car assembly plant. One factor, he said, is the severe shortage of rail cars in the province.

The premier said the railway has ordered 500 boxcars from other manufacturers, with 100 cars due to arrive in B.C. within a week. In order to relieve the pressure caused by the car shortage in the interior and northern parts of the province, the Canadian National Railway has agreed to release some of its cars to the BCR, Barrett said.

Barrett made the statement to the house in his capacity as president of the government-

U.S. Suspends Oil Quotas

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today suspended all oil import quotas and lifted tariffs on oil in an effort to meet an "energy challenge" that he said threatens to blossom into an "energy crisis."

In a 19-page message to Congress, Nixon also called for elimination of price regulations on newly-discovered natural gas, a step he said would increase the cost to industry and the consumer but would encourage development of new supplies.

In the message, he came out strongly against the proposed Canadian pipeline for Alaskan oil but left the way open for such a project if a trans-Alaska pipeline continues to be delayed in the courts.

"I oppose any further delay in order to restudy the advisability of building the pipeline through Canada. Our interest in rapidly increasing our supplies of oil is best served by an Alaskan pipeline," the president said.

Meanwhile, bitter independent gasoline dealers were closing their stations in some parts of the United States Tuesday as major companies boarded depleted supplies for their own outlets.

The gasoline shortage, triggered by the heating fuel crisis last winter, was further aggravated by a spate of refinery shutdowns on the Texas Gulf coast.

It has caused a rash of gasoline rationing at stations across the country, hitting independents hardest.

CZ Profits Up 144% For Quarter

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. has reported a record in sales and earnings, the latter up 144 per cent, for the first three months of 1973.

The company's first-quarter report, released Tuesday, shows sales of $69.6 million, 35 per cent better than the first three months of 1972.

President Robert G. Rogers attributed the record to "unusual" conditions in which world markets for wood products and pulp and paper were strong at the same time.

Net income was $6.1 million, compared with $2.5 million for the corresponding period last year. Share income was 76 cents a share, compared with 31 cents a year ago.

CS Bargaining Rights Detailed

Legislation to give collective bargaining rights to the province's 31,000 civil servants was introduced today.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall introduced the Public Service Labor Relations Act but told the house it is the government's intention to hoist the bill this session and reintroduce it at the fall session.

During the interim period, Hall said temporary wage increases will be negotiated. Advisory committees will be set up to represent the various groups within the civil service to bargain with the government.

Under the terms of the legislation, the province's civil servants will be divided into three bargaining units.

One will consist of the registered nurses and psychiatric nurses working. Hall said it is likely that an amalgamated form of the two unions operating in this area will become the bargaining agent for this group.

The second group will consist of the licensed professionals working in the civil service. Representation of this bargaining unit will likely be a combination of a number of existing groups, Hall said.

The third and largest group will be the general employees not included in the other two categories. Hall said the B.C. Government Employees Union will likely be certified as the bargaining agent for this group.

All employees included by the legislatkon will have the full right to strike, Hall said. There is also provision for voluntary referral of a dispute to a board of arbitration, which would make a binding decision.

Employees excluded from the provisions of the legislation include those working for a crown corporation — B.C. Hydro, B.C. Rail, the proposed Insurance Corporation of B.C., the Energy Commission, and the B.C. Development Corporation — along with employees of the Workmen's Compensation Board, Queen's Printer and the B.C. Institute of Technology.

Also excluded are employees who have not been on the job for a total of 30 days, confidential employees in management positions and personnel officers.

Hall said provisions of the legislation regarding technological change are "the most progressive in the country."

The legislation stipulates that the government is to give notice of its intention to introduce new technology and that collective bargaining is to take place on the effects of that change within two weeks of the notice being given.

owned railway. A meeting of the BCR's board of directors had been held Tuesday morning.

The premier told Liberal leader David Anderson during Tuesday's question period that all of the sub-contracts which can possibly be handled by lower mainland foundries and fabricating shops will be given to those B.C. companies.

Sub-contracts for other components which are not manufacturable in B.C. will have to come from eastern Canada, the U.S. or Japan, he said.

Barrett said construction of the assembly plant will begin immediately with letting of a contract for preparation of the site, which is already owned by the BCR. It is next to the BCR's repair shop at Squamish.

CHIP CARS

Tenders have been called for 1,000 bulkhead flat cars and for 100 chip cars on a lease-to-purchase basis, Barrett said. The tenders should be returned to the railway in mid-May, he said, and will be dealt with at a BCR board meeting on May 18.

He said that if the bids are satisfactory, they will be ordered.

Full capacity of the assembly plant will be reached 18 months after the plant starts to produce cars in January of next year, Barrett said. There is a demand for about 10,000 railway cars in B.C. over the next few years, he said.

A total of 185 people will be directly employed by the car assembly plant. Barrett said "literally hundreds" of other jobs in the sub-contracting industries also will be created.

A STEEL MILL

Regarding the government's desire to see a steel mill established in the province, Barrett told the house during his announcement that the NDP is interested in talking to a private company about it.

"There is enough capacity now to consider a steel mill in this province," he said.

Barrett said the BCR has previously been able to produce only its own cabooses. These cars, which carry a price of $35,000, can be produced by the railway for $27,500, he said.

the government, Hall said, will be the Civil Service Commission, which will operate under the treasury board. He said the Civil Service Commission is in the process of being strengthened to handle the extra workload.

A two-tiered system of bargaining will be employed in negotiating contracts for the civil servants.

Within each of the three basic bargaining units, there will be negotiation for those wages and working conditions which are common to all employees within the bargaining unit.

Conditions which apply only to specific groups will be bargained for by the sub-groups within the bargaining unit.

Hall said the legislation he introduced represents "a remarkable step forward for the public service of B.C."

He said it is unfortunate that B.C. is one of the last jurisdictions in Canada to grant its civil servants collective bargaining right, but added that it is "a good day" now that it has.

The legislation does not allow for collective bargaining of the following: pensions; classification of jobs; training procedures; and promotion.

—Distribution of payroll cheques should be supervised and the railway's comptroller given the responsibility "to follow-up all pay cheques not claimed by payees."

—An independent engineering consultant should review the engineering division's methods regarding tender specifications and calculation of work performed by contractors.

—A corporate solicitor should be appointed to assist railway staff.

—A budget officer should be employed to budget for operating, capital operating and construction costs as well as monthly follow-ups.

—A new method should be devised to calculate depreciation because accumulated depreciation allowances "appear to be grossly inadequate."

A specific problem area highlighted by Minty's report is the engineering division. The report says measurement of work done by contractors is done by arithmetical calculation instead of by counting, weighing "or other obvious, physical methods in use by the contractors themselves."

Regarding capital and construction costs of the railway, Minty said: "There is some question as to whether adequate control is exercised on new line construction projects."

The report said the railway does a large part of the construction work on line extensions, "representing millions of dollars annually. These dollars are not included in formal, annual budgets, and there is little or no external check on these activities of the engineering division.

"External and internal auditors have thus far avoided this particular area. Some concern must thus be expressed about the expenditures of dollars here."

The overruns referred to in Minty's letter are the extra amounts paid to contractors above the contract amounts originally agreed to. The largest recipient of overruns was R. J. Keen and his Keen Industries Ltd. who received a total of $8.8 million between 1968 and 1973, according to Minty's figures.

"Everyone at B.C. Rail speaks in terms of being part of a burgeoning enterprise although the only new line construction growth is above Fort St. John and Fort St. James," he said.

"While new line construction may be paramount in the company's day-to-day operations, surely the presently existing operation should be subject to proper controls and accountability."

Minty also points to the company's "major problem" of shortage of personnel. He said it indicates "a major weakness in control" although he said morale among the staff is excellent.

Regarding general accounting practices used by the railway, Minty recommends specific action in a number of technical areas to bring the company's books up to a modern level. For example, he said explanatory notes should have been attached to the annual financial statement showing repayment of funded debt, outstanding contract commitments and the basic for allocating depreciation.

Inventories of the company's stock and supplies were also criticized as being badly out of date and carelessly arrived at.

In words of the railway's internal audit report for 1972, "the 1972 inventory was probably the worst ever received and by far the most inaccurate. Very few of the employees took enough time to assure accuracy, and seemed to have the attitude that it was not very important.

"The whole physical inventory, being so carelessly taken, leaves one skeptical as to its being even vaguely accurate, and should be retaken as soon as possible."

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey), a persistent critic of the railway's tender procedure, said the "devastating information" contained in Minty's report "bears out the criticism over the years."

He said it is "quite clear" that the Social Credit cabinet held an "unhealthy control" over the railway's operations, which led to a "disguising" of financial transactions.

He criticized Gunderson, who was replaced as executive vice-president of the railway when the NDP government took office, "for having limited the amount of external investigation being done by the auditors."

NDP Nominates N. Saanich Businessman

Members of the Esquimalt-Saanich New Democratic Party Riding Association chose Eric Sherwood, 1968 McTavish, as their federal candidate at a meeting in Mt. View High School Tuesday.

Sherwood, who owns and operates an electronics repair service in North Saanich, ran third in the Aug. 30, 1972, provincial election for Saanich and the Islands, losing out to Conservative Hugh Curtis and Socred Foster Isherwood.

When he won the nomination, Sherwood said: "Electing me gives the lie to constant allegations by the Socreds that the NDP is against free enterprise."

Sharp Slams U.S.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — It has become obvious that the U.S. and other combatants have violated the peace agreement on Vietnam, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Tuesday.

He said the Paris peace settlement called for foreign countries to stop all military activities in Laos and Cambodia.

The United States had breached the agreement by bombing in Cambodia, he said.

The bombing would be a factor considered when Canada made its decision whether to continue as a member of the Interantional Commission of Control and Supervision, Sharp said.

In Hanoi the North Vietnamese said today a statement by Canadian ambassador Michel Gauvin that the wreckage of a Vietnam peace supervision helicopter had been moved by the Communists was "a product of his own imagination."

Gauvin has too often said things that are not right," said a Vietnam News Agency report.

Indonesia, meanwhile, threatened today to pull its peace supervision troops out of the field and back to regional headquarters unless a full investigation is made into the shooting down of the helicopter.

An Indonesian statement read to the ICCS today said unless the ICCS conducts a full investigation of the incident, "the Indonesian delegation reserves its right to unilaterally withdraw its teams to the regional headquarters and to suspend participation in investigations whenever and wherever it deems necessary."

Legislature Nearing End

The legislature appears to be heading toward the prorogation late today despite indications Tuesday the official Social Credit opposition would stall processing of the remaining legislation to require the session's wrap up on Thursday. (See Page 29.)

In little more than the first 40 minutes of today's sitting, the house gave third reading to four bills with minimum of fuss and formality, although formal votes were called on three of them.

That left only two pieces of legislation to debate in committee stage, the companion bills which will establish government-run car insurance in the province, plus adjourned debate on second reading of private member's bills.

As debate began shortly before 10:45 a.m. on the first of the two contentious bills, the Automobile Insurance Act, it was obvious that all three opposition parties would maintain the hammering they had already given the legislation in second reading.

Despite frequent cautioning by committee chairmen Hartly Dent that MLAs should debate specific sections of the bill and not in principle, opposition members repeated many of the arguments raised in second reading stage.

In particular, they strongly criticized the monopoly and compulsion aspects of the plan, which they said will put private companies out of business and deny B.C. motorists the freedom to choose between insurance coverage under private enterprise and the government plan.

Garde Gardon (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) said the denial of choice was the "most regrettable feature" of the bill.

Ed. Smith (SC—North Peace) challenged Highways Minister Robert Strachan to state, before committee stage consideration went any further, what the average driver's premium would be under the government car insurance scheme.

Smith maintained Strachan has had "ample time" to find out on an actuarial basis what the cost would be "at least to within a dollar or two."

If the minister was not prepared to give predictions of premium rates, Smith said, "we can only conclude that he is withholding information from the house that is vital and important and should be part of this debate in committee sections."

$525,000 Bugging 'Pay-Off'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's campaign organization has offered a $525,000 out-of-court settlement to the Democratic party for the bugging of its offices last year, sources said today.

Meanwhile President Nixon said Tuesday he has uncovered "major developments" in the Watergate case through his own "intensive new inquiries."

He will fire anyone in the government who is guilty, he added.

Amplifying Nixon's remarks, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler strongly hinted that some presidential aides would be dismissed.

Nixon, in saying he would allow his aides to testify under oath before a Senate committee, reversed an earlier refusal to permit them to appear before a full committee of Congress.

However, the President said that "executive privilege is expressly reserved and may be asserted during the course of the questioning as to any questions."

Executive privilege, as described by the president, is the position that his aides cannot be forced to testify before Congress.

The president's remarks were made on a day in which there were published reports that high White House aides were about to resign. There wer no resignations.

Nixon said he began his own investigation March 21 "as a result of serious charges which came to my attention."

Ziegler said the president was referring in part to sworn testimony by Watergate conspirator James McCord, who has said superiors told him that at least three presidential associates had advance knowledge of the Watergate bugging: Former Attorney General John Mitchell, presidential counsel John. W. Dean and former presidential assistant Jeb Stuart Magruder.

Shortly after Nixon spoke to reporters, Martha Mitchell, wife of former attorney-general Mitchell, who resigned as campaign manager two weeks after the break-in, repeated fears "they're trying to nail my husband.

"I think they're going to try and accuse him of everything under the sun," she said. "They want to hang something on him."

If accepted, the reported settlement would put the Nixon campaign in the unique — if uncomfortable — position of helping to underwrite the Democratic multi-million-dollar debt with contributions from GOP faithful.

It would also write an end to the $6.4 million civil damage suit the Democratic National Committee slapped on the Committee for the re-Election of the President shortly after the break-in.

The trial is expected to begin in June, involving many of the same withesses from the Nixon campaign who figured in the January criminal trial of the seven men indicted for the raid.

A CIVIL SERVICE DAY

If you're lucky enough to be a civil servant, Easter Monday will be a holiday, but for many others it will be just another working day.

Provincial, federal and municipal government offices are closed Monday. This includes the Income Tax office, Canada Manpower, and the Unemployment Insurance Commission, but not post offices. They will be open all day.

But banks, most department stores and movie theatres will be open as usual, and local buses will be running on their regular schedules.

Liquor stores and public libraries will be closed Monday, but pubs and the Provincial Museum will be open.

Only Oak Bay will have garbage pickup on Monday; garbagemen in the other three municipalities have a holiday.

The dockyard of CFB Esquimalt will be shut down.

The Swartz Bay ferry to Tsawwassen begins its summer schedule Thursday, and it will run every hour from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. throughout the summer. Pacific Stage lines buses to Vancouver will be leaving every hour from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. over the long weekend.

The Sidney-Anacortes ferry will be sailing daily at 12:30 p.m.

The Victoria Times will publish on Monday.

Whites Get Warning

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The leader of Rhodiesia's African National Council (ANC) warned the country's whites today that frustration leads a people to resort to violent measures.

Edson Sithole, ANC publicity secretary, said:

"No one cherishes seeing the races here cut each other's throat, but this stage could be reached if the African's aspirations are thwarted without end by the Europeans."

He was commenting on a statement Tuesday night by the British foreign secretary, Sir Alex Douglas-Home, in which he said the gun was not the answer to Rhodesia's constitutional problems.

Sithole said the ANC wanted a peaceful solution but its efforts in seeking it were being frustrated daily by "a government that is blind to a deteriorating situation."

"The ANC is trying to arrest the situation but the Rhodisian government is frustrating our efforts by nursing the situation, thinking that it could be rectified by the force of a gun from Rhodesia's security forces."

Meanwhile, the Australian post office in Sydney today cut off telephone, telecommunications and mail services from the Rhodesian information centre here.

Postmaster General Nigel Bowen said the decision was taken in view of Rhodesia's "illegal regime" and followed an investigation of the centre.

The analyst said there was no other "secret" evidence.

Several other U.S. officials, meanwhile, said they were aware of all the evidence available to the American embassy and there was no conclusive indication that the helicopter wreckage was moved.

Canadian Commissioner Michel Gauvin has given further currency to reports that the wreckage might have been moved by publicly challenging the Viet Cong to let the survivors revisit the crash site as a conclusive test.

But Gauvin says he has no knowledge himself of the purported evidence that the helicopters were shifted by the Viet Cong sometime between Sunday, April 8 and Wednesday, April 11.

The North Vietnamese newspaper Nhan Dan, reported over Radio Hanoi and monitored in Saigon, said:

"Gauvin's remarks are just a product of his own imagination and had nothing to do with the conclusions of the investigation team: such remarks are also a slight on the integrity of the concerned ICCS members.

"Gauvin has too often said things that are not right. He is not impartial, although impartiality is always what he has insisted on. In such a light, one cannot help thinking that he is acting with a bad intention."

Capt. Parsons said that before the helicopters were fired on he had not been looking at a map and had no idea where his helicopter landed.

But he suspected that they had indeed been off course from the route followed when the Viet Cong brought the survivors out of the mountains of western Quang Tri province on the night of April 8 to 9.

The helicopter in which Capt. Parsons was riding, flying behind and slightly higher than the first, was the first to come under fire from a heavy machine-gun.

"We travelled a straight course for several seconds with rounds popping all around us. They seemed to come in bursts of five or six rounds. Then suddenly the pilot started taking evasive action and then we got landed.

"On the ground, there was quite a bit of small-arms shooting at us. It was in the trees zinging all over the place. Once we got behind a bank for a minute or so it slackened off, but you'd still hear the odd round. I remember when I stood up with the Viet Cong interpreter, several rounds being shot overhead.

"Then once the interpreter started shouting who we were and stop shooting, the whole thing stopped just like that."

"I don't think they really knew the marking on the ICCS helicopter or who we were or what our mission was."

"By now everybody should know what the markings are and know the complete thing, regardless of who they are," Capt. Parsons said.

Capt. Parsons said that reports that the survivors were intimidated into signing false statements about the location of the crash were "blown out of proportion."

"At this stage on Sunday, April 8 we were still pretty uncertain of what our status was. They told us we would be looked after, we were okay, they were going to take us out and what not.

"But you know, there was still quite a bit of uncertainty there and they hadn't told us when they were going to take us out," the captain said.

The statements which the Viet Cong asked the survivors to sign included a speeific location, which Capt. Parsons insisted be taken out before the survivors signed it. The Viet Cong agreed.

"We managed to get some words changed in there, so we just decided that to keep everything going smoothly, we'd sign it. To me it certainly didn't incriminate us in any way, shape or form.

"But there was a limit to what they would let us change or take out. 'You will sign, you must sign,' they insisted.

Capt. Parsons is still at a loss to explain the navigation error he now believes that the Air America charter service pilots made, flying for about 10 minutes in almost exactly the wrong direction.

The pilots of the lead helicopter, the ICCS officers and a Viet Cong officer aboard the lead helicopter were all supposed to make sure that the aircraft stayed in a two-mile corridor over Highway 9.

A Momentous Decision

News that the Royal Theatre is for sale creates at once an opportunity and a problem. The opportunity is that the city or the Capital Region could purchase the old landmark and use it as a community theatre. The problem is a multiple one. If the theatre is purchased, the chances of getting a new modern community concert hall may be postponed for years. If the theatre is not purchased, but torn down or converted to some alternative private use, the Victoria Symphony could be left without a stage this year and virtually put out of business. The patient work of a dozen years could be wiped out overnight.

Clearly, the city is faced with a crucial decision and some careful planning will be necessary. Greater Victoria is the only community of its size in Canada without an adequate concert hall. A group of local people, organized as the Pacific Foundation, has been working through various channels to lay the basis for a worthy complex comprising a 2,200-seat concert hall, a convention hall of 2,000 capacity, a daycare centre, various offices, studios and workrooms, and catering facilities. The concept is similar to that of the Regina Centre. Its size would permit fairly large conventions, and would encourage many stage attractions which now pass up Victoria because of inadequate stage and seating accommodation.

It is a question, though, whether the community would stand the financial burden of purchasing the Royal Theatre and also investing in a centre such as decribed. The theatre, seating 1,400, if taken over would reportedly require many thousands of dollars worth of renovations, including wiring, foyer extension and other needs. In any case, as many critics have pointed out, the backstage and dressing room facilities are inadequate for a large production, even for a massed choir. But it is much better than nothing, and it is the lifeline of the Symphony. A year's hiatus in the Symphony's operations could lose the conductor and many of the musicians and it might take years to regain the orchestra's present status.

A compromise might be devised, whereby the theatre was purchased and left largely in its present state, while a concert hall complex was started adjacent to the theatre, taking in what was needed of the block. This area was designated a special precinct some years ago, and the proposed complex would be very much in keeping with the earlier plan.

But the project would take money — provincial, city or regional, and possibly federal, through employment incentives. A bold step now would give the community a giant leap forward in all the fields which would benefit from an adequate modern stage, convention hall and allied facilities.

The proposed sale of the Royal Theatre is a seemingly minor event which could precipitate a landslide of good or ill for the community. It is becoming a major local problem of our time.

The Non-Hero

Sean MacStiofain, called the former head of guerrilla gunmen in Northern Ireland, has emerged from Dublin prison with stature shrunken beyond the emaciation of a brief engagement with hunger striking. Committed to jail for six months for illegal IRA membership, he has been released early, like any other petty offender, for good behavior.

He vowed he would fast to death unless he was released almost immediately from imprisonment — but then accepted nourishment. Whatever his other exploits may have been, his performance as a committed offender seems less than heroic to many of his erstwhile followers. His pledges of starvation became a little flexible when put to the test of actuality. His public statement on release, declaring his stand the same as when he went to prison, has become a little less credible to his followers, or former followers. His actions have not matched his words.

Mr. MacStiofain behaved as a fallible human, and did not live up to the grim tradition established by earlier irreconcilable rebels.

He leaves the more extreme of his Irish following perhaps wondering where the giants are today. That could be a contribution to the cause of peace. In the current version of the Irish troubles, there appear to be no rebellious giants, just irrational people carrying violent conflict to the ultimate depravity of murder — and not only on the IRA side.

Loggers' Bill

The Fisheries Association of British Columbia has given the reply which might have been expected to the Council of Forest Industries suggestion that fishing interests should contribute to stream protection: Nice try, but no thanks.

The Fisheries Association seems to be on solid ground when it rejects what it considers to be an invitation to contribute to the costs of repairing damage done by logging. On the face of it, if logging practices are causing injury, then surely the loggers and those associated with them should foot the bill.

CHARLES BARTLETT

Energy: Alternatives to Oil

WASHINGTON — The Nixon energy message will bring a new focus to the budget issue because the President has reportedly decided against proposing the expenditure of additional funds to research and develop new sources of energy.

This decision will put the Nixon proposal in direct confrontation with the bolder plan advanced by Washington Sen. Henry Jackson to commit $2 billion a year to an energy-oriented version of the space race. Jackson wants a crash search for domestic alternatives to the glum prospect of a deepening reliance on Middle Eastern oil.

President's Plan

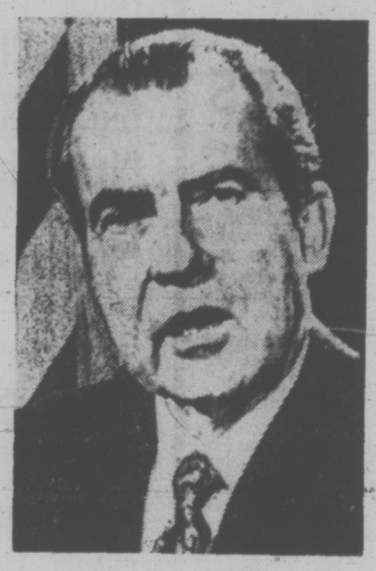
The President's message will mark a shift in the administration's strategy on energy. Until recently Nixon officials have talked freely of an "energy crisis" on the theory that this designation would assist the public's adjustment to an era of scarce and high-priced fuel. Now there is a new line that talk of "crisis" will only encourage the Arab producers to behave more greedily in their price increases.

"When you inherit a problem from your predecessors, you can cheerfully call it a crisis," one old White House hand, a Democrat, observes. "But after you've held the presidency for four years and allowed a problem to take on menacing proportions, you find it hard to concede that you have fathered a crisis."

The Democrats are not alone in suspecting that the President's refusal to sponsor heavier outlays on energy research is more political than fiscal. It is clear that the costly Jackson proposal will improve Mr. Nixon's chances of being able to force the Democrats into the awkward posture of raising taxes to finance their additions to his January budget.

But there will be clear elements of false economy in failing to make a maximum effort to achieve the technological breakthrough which may mitigate the fuel pinch of the next 15 years. The $40 billion race for the moon in the last decade was pure sport alongside the political and economic penalties this nation may pay for excessive reliance on foreign supplies of fuel.

While the "energy crisis" talk may



PRESIDENT NIXON

stimulate foreign oil producers to dream of rich new pricing opportunities, they will only acquire these opportunities if the United States does not strenuously attempt to exploit its potential in oil shale, coal gasification, magnetohydrodynamics, nuclear energy, and more exotic possibilities like sofar energy and fusion reaction.

Most of these are long-term energy prospects, many years and many research dollars away, but they are sobering prospects to foreign oil producers, who need to weigh the present demand for their reserves against a possibility that oil will someday cease to be a basic fuel. An intense struggle in the West to discover alternatives is going to make these producers far less disposed to hoard their oil supply through exorbitant pricing.

The basic question for the consumer is simply whether power is going to be available at a reasonable cost.

Last fall Peter Peterson, former Secretary of Commerce who probed the energy question with an open and imaginative mind, concluded that a strong energy research program, with a little luck and a lot of commitment, may hold the key to capturing for future generations the agreeable prospect of adequate energy at reasonable prices with a minimal degree of pollution.

Implausible Excuse

In declining to propose this commitment, the White House will maintain that scientific manpower is not available to enlarge substantially upon the $790 million of government-financed energy research now going forward. But this shortage of scientists and engineers does not seem plausible in a period when the nation is not embarked on a major effort in space, defence research or supersonic transportation.

The President is perhaps trapped in his promise not to raise taxes. But a campaign promise that should never have been made seems far less important than the requirement for strong leadership in what is, at the very least, a critical juncture of the national life.

The High Cost of Insurance

CALGARY—When mass immigration was at its peak 60 years ago, the newcomers came equipped with a potent urge to recreate in the west cultural replicas of the communities they had left, to do things here the way they did things at home. The same tendency has been characteristic of the Saskatchewanites who have been moving to Alberta for the last decade. Especially when it comes to automobile insurance.

If there is one thing that drives these newcomers up the wall it is the discovery of the high cost of auto insurance in Alberta compared with Saskatchewan. A sure sign of spring is when they air their protests in letters to the editors as they renew their auto licenses and pay their compulsory insurance premiums.

If there is one thing that drives Alberta insurance agents up the wall it is the appearance of letters from former Saskatchewanites making these comparisons. No letter of outrage is ever allowed to go unanswered. The answer usually takes the form of a blanket denial that the rates are comparable.

As Alberta is now the only western province still clinging to private enterprise auto insurance (B.C.'s new plan will be used next year) the agents are understandably touchy when government car insurance is mentioned. As touchy, almost, as the immigrants over what they regard as outrageous gouging by the private insurance business.

In such an atmosphere, a dispassionate appraisal is difficult. But as it is one of the loudest, longest sustained and thorniest public issues on the prairies, we'll give it a try.

Compulsory Coverage

It is now compulsory in all provinces for car owners to carry public liability and property damage insurance. That being so a non-ideological concern for efficiency would seem to dictate that one cheque to the government when licenses were renewed would make sense. That is in fact what all the people of the west except Albertans have opted for. When you get down to simple arithmetic, Albertans seem to pay a high price for their individualism.

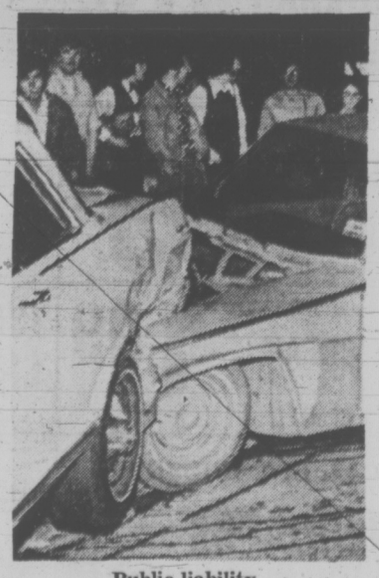
Let's take a 1971 Belair Chevrolet sedan for example, licensed in Edmonton, Regina and Winnipeg. Its owner will be a man over 25 who has had no accidents in three or four years. The car would be driven to work but not for work purposes.

The policy would cover $50,000 in public liability and $200 deductible all peril in Winnipeg and Regina, $250 deductible in Edmonton. In all cases liability limits could be raised to $300,000 for an extra $10 premium.

In Winnipeg this package would cost the Belair owner $109, in Saskatchewan the fee would be $85 and in Alberta it would be $130. These rates are for preferred risks.

But for drivers with accidents and under 25 year olds, the differences widen radically. You cannot drive a car without insurance in Alberta. But if you have had an accident getting insurance becomes very difficult and expensive. There is no law that compells any private company to insure anybody. Some of the premiums charged non-preferred risks are horrendous. They can run to as high as $1,000 for a Belair owner with a bad accident in his immediate past.

For a run-of-the-mill accident he would pay an extra premium of $39 in Alberta but nothing extra in Saskatchewan. Manitoba operates under a different system. It has a demerit system which takes in both accidents and traffic offences. A single accident or traffic violation would be free of penalty, two would raise the fee $50 and further repetition would make it even more expensive. The maximum for a driver who had earned 20 demerits would be $300.



Public liability

In Alberta the under-25-year-old driver gets badly soaked. In Manitoba an accident-free driver under 25 pays a flat $22 extra till he reaches 25. In Regina he pays only $2 above the basic rate. In Alberta the surcharge is $134. These are all male rates. Young women, less prone obviously to dangerous driving, pay only $7 to $10 more than the standard rates to their elders.

These figures are all from official and company sources so are seldom disputed. It is when consideration turns to claim adjustment that the arguments start. Alberta car dealers share the insurance brethren's antipathy toward Saskatchewan.

They claim the wheat province chisels on damage repair. One agency claimed Saskatchewan government adjuters refused to authorize replacement of a damaged fender until it had scoured the province to locate a used one in an auto-wrecking yard. In Albert, he said, adjusters and garages go first class. And this, though he did not admit it, may be a factor in the high cost of insurance in Alberta.

Alberta agents insist that comparison between the province is comparing bananas and coconuts. Alberta, with two large cities, has twice as many accidents per car mile as Saskatchewan, and rates are a function of accident experience.

The essential argument however is not over accidents, adjustments or repairs. It is about premiums paid by carefull drivers who do not have accidents, but see the premiums on their car insurance rise steadily year by year. They cannot be fobbed off with explanations that rates go up because of the accident toll.

No Explanation

"But why me?" he cries in protest. "Why do I always have to pay for somebody else's damage?" The Alberta insurance agents have no convincing explanation. But Manitoba, under its new Autopac system, thinks it has at last a partial answer.

Manitoba, by coupling traffic violations with accidents encourages safe driving by penalizing both traffic violations and accidents. Manitoba insures the owner-driver and not the car. Thus in Manitoba the owner of a 1958 Edsel will pay the same premium as the owner of a 1973 Cadillac.

At first glance, that is unfair because it will cost a lot more to repair a Cadillac than a jallopy. But the owner of a Cadillac will probably be a lot less accident-prone than a jallopy owner, because he has so much more invested.

To a casual observer, the trend is running against the private car insurance industry. It is three down and one to go in the west, and unless the "one" can find a more convincing answer than it has to date to the dollar and cents argument for government car insurance, the agents are doomed, regardless of what government is in power in Alberta.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Much that is Best

I believe that City Council has made a grave error in judgment by asking the City Manager for his resignation, and ask that they reconsider and revoke that decision.

None of us outside Council is competent to judge Bill Hooson's administrative abilities; however, there are many of us who have had experience with his abilities as listener, as judge, as giver of advice and direction.

To you I respectfully put the argument that these latter qualities count too, and that they should outweigh any other consideration.

I speak from experience. In my years at Victoria Cool-Aid — in the years when no one else would have anything to do with us — Bill was always there, always available to give advice and criticism and direction. Council's decision appears to downplay the importance of these qualities.

What do we want in a City Manager? Only an administrator? Only a file keeper? Only one of a million faceless and heartless bureaucrats we can find anywhere?

Or do we want a man who builds respect and confidence, mutual trust and co-operation among his colleagues and among his fellow citizens?

If we choose the latter, we must choose for the guy we already have. Bill is a man of enormous integrity and compassion and good humor — he embodies personally much that is best about Victoria. He is a man at the top whom anyone can talk to.

It is a joke for Council to look for qualities of humanity and compassion in its own city — and to reject them in its own City Manager.

It is a joke for Council to speak caringly about Bill's personal health — and to endanger it by treating him as he's been treated.

But it is no joke that this decision should have been taken at all.

Where Are You?

I believe that this new NDP government legislation giving the municipalities power to invest in business is a definite attempt to undermine the fragile capitalist system we have previously enjoyed in the province.

It would seem that the opportunity for mayors and others to invest money that is forced away from people in the form of taxes will be one that will spell an end to the frontier spirit in British Columbia.

Social Credit, where are you when we need you? —Thomas B. Raymond, 216 Henry Street, Sidney.

Unsatisfied

I read recently that if your income from any source is in excess of $960 per annum the Canadian Pension Plan is cut, and if you receive more than $1600 the CPP is further reduced. I would like to know the true statement.

Further, if you accept the Canada Pension Plan you will receive three weeks support from the Unemployment Insurance Commission, about $300 upon retirement.

This, according to the Liberals in Ottawa, is to bridge the gap from earnings to pension, but what Ottawa is in fact saying: you are now 65 years old and no longer any good so here is some money to buy a good gun or 15 cents worth of rat poison, we don't care how you do it but get out of our way.

Some may think you have no right to both the CPP and the UIC funds, but when you have paid into those funds for 10 years and 35 years I say you have earned this money and it is yours.

I hope that all those people over 60 years of age will write their Members and get this injustice straightened out. — F. H. Boulter, 808 Brock Ave.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of April 18, 1913:

Everything aboard the new CPR steamer Princess Maquinna, which is lying at the yards of the B.C. Marine railway, is in the finishing stage. Machinists are connecting the numerous gauges with the various parts of the engines and boilers, carpenters are fitting up the staterooms, saloons and dining room, and painters are all over the ship. It is expected that the west coast steamer will turn over her engines for the first time early next month. She appears to be a most suitable craft for the West Coast run.

DR. DAVID LIVINGSTONE . . . hope out of darkness

CENTURY OF CHANGE IN AFRICA

He Was a Man With a Mission

By FREDERICK LUMLEY

At dawn on May 1, 1873, Dr. David Livingstone was found lying dead in his tent beside the marshes of Lake Bangwuelo, in what is today Zambia. His faithful servants embalmed his body and bore it on the long and hazardous overland journey to the British Consul at Zanzibar, but first they removed his heart and buried it where Livingstone had died, and where his spirit will always remain, in Africa.

Livingstone was the first popular hero to catch the 19th century imagination without having won fame in wars, politics or empire building. He was given a state funeral and his body now lies in Westminster Abbey, but during his life he received no titles or honors and died without knowing whether his family would be provided for. Livingstone was concerned with the human condition, he felt the necessity for a symbiosis of the European and African races, for he asserted, like his compatriot Robert Burns, that "a man's a man for a' that!"

A man of science with a mission rather than missionary, Livingstone was never an evangelist preacher in the Scottish and North American tradition (indeed in London he had not been considered a particularly promising candidate because of this). Once in Africa Livingstone felt the exhilaration of his task which gave him the force and sense of direction; out of darkness came hope, and the direction of his unknown safari was gradually clear and unmistakable. To all around him Livingstone had the charisma of simplicity and sincerity.

The centenary of Livingstone's death reminds us that a life has to be lived forwards, it can only be understood after the passing of one's own age and through the eyes of another.

Victorian Certainty

We have to bridge the period between the dark continent, which he first explored, to that of the largely post-colonial Africa of independent nation states whose names such as Zambia, Malawi, Tanzania, Botswana, Burundi cover some of the regions he knew best.

It is hard for us, a century later, to share the certainties of mid-Victorian beliefs, the whole-hearted optimism which was engendered by the rise of capitalism. In that dramatic meeting on the shores of Lake Tanganyika between Henry Morton Stanley and the doctor, Stanley could not resist telling Livingstone of what had been happening in the outside world during his (Livingstone's) three years' absence; "of the Pacific railroads, of the opening of the Suez Canal, o. the transatlantic cables." Everybody had to share the benefits of European civilization.

It would have been impossible for Livingstone to have ever envisaged a time when Europe should lose its self-confidence. Livingstone was convinced that by opening up the dark continent, Christianity and the benefits of European civilization would come in their wake. What went wrong?

"For the last dozen years Europe has been examining its conscience," Jean Rilliet wrote for a recent issue of the Tribune de Geneve, in an article on the Swiss Philafricaine Mission entitled Are the Days of Mission in Pagan Countries Over? Rilliet reminded us how, in building up an immense empire, traders and industrialists had used missionaries, "pretending to be the bearers of what they called the good news" to camouflage their pillages.

With the settlers came the rivalry between the European powers. Artificial frontiers cutting across tribes were drawn in the scramble for territories, in the need for European lebensraum. The Union Jack, the French Tricilor, the Belgian, German, Portuguese and Spanish colors announced that new colonies had been annexed.

Ended Slave Trade

The battle against the slave trade, which Livingstone did so much to end, was no sooner over than European dispossession began. Only the unhealthy climate and tropical diseases prevented Europeans from settling throughout the entire continent as they had in the two Americas. In the equable climate of Southern Africa alone European settlement took roots.

It was on the eve of the Second World War that a doctor missionary, not unlike Livingstone — Albert Schweitzer — came to the Gabon in Central Africa to preach as Livingstone had done, a religion of love and Christian fellowship, and to treat diseases such as malaria, sleeping sickness, dysentery and leprosy. In 1914 his African patients saw their doctor arrested by the Europeans, for Schweitzer — an Alsation — was technically a German citizen in a French colony.

Livingstone and Schweitzer both identified themselves with the African ethos, but their difference in outlook came from the centuries in which they lived. Livingstone never abandoned civilization, but sought to bring the benefits of its progress to others. He shared the spirit of the age which was one of optimism. Schweitzer, on the other hand, declared himself a pessimist, and felt that we were moving towards a new kind of "middle ages." Both went about their lives with the same personal belief in "reverence for life" and man's duty to help others. Moral greatness was their bond.

"Africa has survived the period of colonial occupation as it did the slave trade, and men such as Livingstone and Schweitzer have given their example. By 1959 Prime Minister Macmillan gave his famous "winds of change" speech, signifying the end of a colonial epoch, and the following year General de Gaulle gave all French colonies the right to vote on their independence. Only the Portuguese in Angola and Mozambique and the Unilateral Declaration o. Independence (UDI) by the white settlers of Rhodesia in 1965 have withstood these winds.

Livingstone believed he could share his belief in life, the Christian belief. Other missionaries followed where he had been, and today recent statistics show that in Central Africa where Livingstone visited, 22 per cent of the population of Zambia are Christians, 38 per cent in Malawi, 13 per cent in Tanzania and 68 per cent in Burundi.

A Young Elite

Just as Marco Polo's trek across the silk routes to China, or Columbus' discovery of the New World, or, in our time, man's landing on the moon, Livingstone will be remembered first as an explorer, coming also in peace, for all mankind.

How can today's generation from our advanced technological civilizations help the countries of the third world on the lines the recent missionary conference in Bangkok suggested? They will find already a young African elite, and, together with scientific and technical assistance, they will help realize Livingstone's prophetic words: "The day of Africa is yet to come . . . All will be right at last."

ALTERNATIVE 'ROLL-BACK' MIGHT HAVE BEEN FASCISM

'Nixon Has Performed a Historical Service'

Answer: His role in American history has been that of the man who had to liquidate, defuse, deflate the exaggerations of the romantic period of American imperialism and American inflation. Inflation of promises, inflation of hopes, the Great Society, American supremacy—all that had to be deflated, because it was all beyond our power and beyond the nature of things. His role has been to do that. I think on the whole he's done pretty well at it.

Q: Aside from his prolongation of the Vietnam war, which you've criticized, how do you feel about his domestic policies?

A: He will do anything he thinks is expedient.

Q: Is that necessarily a bad thing?

A. No, it isn't. He is a Keynesian when it suits him, and he isn't when it doesn't suit him. That's the way public men have to act.

Q: You see him as responsive to public mood.

A: He's very cunning.

Q: So you would give him rather high marks?

A: Yes. He has played a very disagreeable role, but a role imposed upon him by historical necessity.

Q: Do you look on Nixon's crushing defeat of McGovern as merely a personal victory, or as something deeper—a repudiation of the philosophy of the New Deal and of the Great Society?

A: My feeling is that what happened in the Nixon-McGovern election is what happens in all elections of advanced modern industrial societies when the basic policy of the Jacobin or Rousseauistic philosophy is repudiated. By that I mean the belief that man is essentially good and can be made perfect by making the environment perfect, and that the environment can be made perfect by taxing the mass of people to spend money for improving it. Modern society won't accept that philosophy and it is usually repudiated. Sometimes the repudiation takes the form of fascism, but this rejection is morally and intellectually the equivalent of it, without some of the ugly features of fascism.

A: The equivalent of fascism in my view is the repudiation by the society, by the masses of people, of the whole Rousseauistic belief in man's inherent goodness and perfectability. The mechanics of the repudiation is another matter. Whether the society takes the form of a dictatorship or a parliamentary system is a secondary question to what is being repudiated.

LIPPMANN

Q: Were these ideas repudiated because they were too ambitious, or because they represented something incapable of achievement?

A: I think they represent something that is incapable of being achieved in human society. They are philosophically and morally untrue. Man is not naturally good, nor is his nature perfectable by economic means. The Jacobin philosophy is being repudiated in every advanced society, because it involves attempting to do by taxation and appropriation things not possible to do. It's not possible by government action or any other action I know to create a perfect environment that will make a perfect man.

Q: Do you believe that those policies did in fact fail?

A: I don't think every detail of those policies, every reform, failed. But the idea that motivated them has failed.

★ ★ ★

Q: If the idea has been repudiated, then what happens to the effort to achieve social change through government action? Is that repudiated too?

A: It goes on, but there are a lot of errors that have been discarded in the course of human history, and this is one of them.

Q: Do you think the effort to achieve any kind of social change through the government is undesirable?

A: Certainly it's desirable. It's not the effort to achieve reforms that's wrong, but the inner ideological or philosophical content of these particular efforts. This is where the fallacy lies — the belief in human perfectability through government action.

Q: Did McGovern represent this philosophy?

A: Yes. McGovern believed in all the corollaries that go with this philosophy, and he espoused any one of them that seemed to him promising. In this election the people themselves showed that they won't have it. This is a philosophy that has been more or less prevalent in the western world since the 18th century. People have fallen for it for generations. But now it is being repudiated almost everywhere. Sooner or later it always gets repudiated.

Q: How does this philosophy of human perfectability through government action differ from the kind of liberalism represented by Lyndon Johnson?

A: The difference is that liberalism is a much more measured form of human improvement. It neither claims nor seeks the exaggerated results claimed by Rousseauism and Jacobinism. It regards man as improvable, but not perfectable; it takes a much more modest view of what mortal man is capable of doing.

Q. Were the goals of the New Deal and the Great Society rooted in this Rousseauistic or Jacobin approach?

A: Yes. We have been in the grip of this general view of the nature of society at least since Woodrow Wilson.

Q: If this philosophy has been repudiated, does this mean there will be less government intervention in the lives of the people?

A: No, I wouldn't say it would mean less intervention, but the difference between perfectability and improvability is a very big one. The belief in government as the agent of prefectability is what has been repudiated. People have rejected the idea that you can use the government — by controlling it, by getting the majority or physically seizing it — to do what I regard as what history has now shown to be impossible. Sometimes this repudiation can take the form of fascism. But it didn't here. Instead, it took the form of Nixon Republicanism. But a corruption of that, or a more extreme form of it, could lead to fascism, just as fascism can lead to Nazism. The Jacobin-Rousseauistic view of society and human nature will lead to the most dangerous forms of fascism or even Nazism if it is not brought under control.

Q: So this administration should be welcomed by liberals because it's headed off a reaction that could have degenerated into fascism?

A: I supported Nixon in '68 and I preferred him vastly to McGovern in '72. In that sense, yes. That doesn't mean I'm enthusiastically pro-Nixon. What he's done is historical; Nixon has performed a service that historically has to be performed if American society was not to be blown up or disintegrate or crumble.

Q: Nixon has certainly appealed to self-reliance and attacked the social welfare programs of the past four years. Won't this lead to a cynical neglect of the poor, the disadvantaged and the abandoned?

A: I thought there was no hope for those abandoned, if you call them that, members of society in those programs. These programs had been greatly excessive, as occurs in every advanced society. But it was much exacerbated in our society, because actually taking from those who had really meant taking from whites to give to blacks. That was a cause to deep division and bad feeling in this country.

Q: But if the government does not play a big role, what hope is there for the disadvantaged?

A: I'm not accepting Nixon's philosophy. But no government can bring people up. They have to achieve it themselves. The belief that the government can do it is one of the great illusions of our time.

Playing the Energy Game

By JOHN NICHOL

William Davis of Ontario has called for a national energy policy. He wants the federal government and the 10 provincial governments to thrash out a long term plan for the distribution of Canadian gas and oil.

This demand for a national policy is a direct response to Alberta's plan to boost the prices of gas sold to Ontario. The idea of a "national policy" is a good one — for Ontario.

When Premier Lougheed of Alberta announced the intended price increases, Ontario reacted with something close to indignation. Then it became obvious that Alberta held all the cards. Alberta has the gas. Ontario needs it. So does the U.S. So, if Ontario wants it, Ontario should pay. In this situation there were a few moves open to Mr. Davis.

So he decided to change the game. Instead of an Ontario-Alberta confrontation — which Ontario would lose — he proposed a "national energy policy". And what does that mean? That means that Alberta will be one of 11 (10 provinces plus the federal government) instead of one of two. And since central Canada dominates the federal system, the game is drastically changed.

Regardless of which party is in power, the MPs from Central Canada dominate the caucus of the governing party. The ministers from central Canada, from all the parties, dominate Parliament. The West and the Maritimes have no real gut power in Ottawa. They depend on the goodwill of central Canada. They depend on the ability of central Canadian politicians and journalists to "understand" the "problems".

There is a growing understanding in western Canada of the way in which this country was produced: With Toronto and Westmount at centre-stage and everything else in supporting roles. There is also a growing feeling in the west that the play has run too long. The ways in which constitutional and political changes will reflect this fact are unclear — but they are coming. Thus, when Ontario (which has no gas) starts talking "national policy" to Alberta (which has all the gas), western ears perk up.

There is a similarity between the American approach to Canada, and Ontario's approach to Alberta. The United States is desperately short of energy. Canada has gas, oil and hydro potential which the U.S. would like to use. On a one-to-one basis, on the issue of energy supply alone, the U.S. cannot win. So they shift to wider ground. They start talking about a "continental energy policy", and expand the energy talks to include trade, money, tariffs and anything else that springs to mind.

Ontario wants a national energy policy in the same way that the Americans want a continental energy policy. In both cases they would like to protect their energy supply by establishing a policy superstructure which will dominate the local authority — in one case Canada — in the other Alberta. They are both saying — "We must rise above these petty provincialisms."

President Kennedy once said that the Soviet idea of negotiation is "what's mine is mine, what's yours is negotiable".

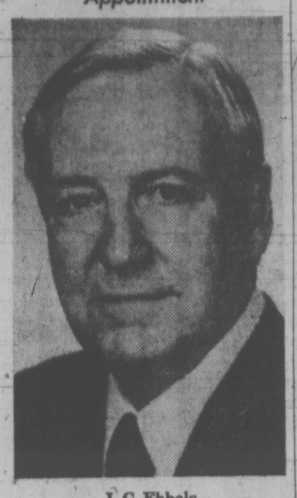
Shell Canada Appointment



J. C. Ebbels

Shell Canada Limited announces that J. C. Ebbels, Calgary, assistant to the vice president, exploration and production, has assumed responsibility for government and industry relations and other activities in the field of public affairs insofar as they concern the company's exploration and production activities. These duties were formerly the responsibility of William L. Grossman, vice president, who retired April 1, 1973.

Mr. Ebbels is a graduate in Arts and Law of the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon. He joined Shell as a solicitor in the legal department and was land manager until his latest appointment. He is a member of the Law Society of Alberta and the Canadian Bar Association and serves on the Boards of Directors of the Alberta and British Columbia Divisions of the Canadian Petroleum Association.

Dynasty

Dynasty Explorations Ltd., of Vancouver, reports earnings of $4,407,887 or $1.47 a share for 1972, compared with $1,776,281 or 59 cents a share the year before.

The figures were contained in Dynasty's annual report. The company had earlier reported net earnings of $1.51 a share for 1972.

Dynasty's 40-per-cent interest in Anvil Mining Corp. earned $4 816,000 in 1972, equal to $1.61 per Dynasty share.

Dynasty president R. E. Gordon Davis said that although Anvil is in a favorable earnings position, it faces several years of capital debt repayment before it can pay any dividends to its shareholders. Cyprus Mines Corp. owns the other 60 per cent of Anvil.

EDP

Shareholders have approved an increase in the authorized share capital of EDP Industries to 24 million shares from eight million reports company president Edward Pyrik.

"EDP industries continues to make good progress and should further increase its earnings in the second quarter," Pyrik said.

Board chairman James A. Pattison said the action was taken to give the company more flexibility for future acquisitions.

EDP Industries is a public company specializing in computerized packages and has data service centres in Vancouver and Toronto.

Pacific Pete

Pacific Petroleums Ltd. reports net earnings of $9,900,000 or 47 cents a share for the first quarter of 1973, an increase of 17 per cent over the same period last year.

Earnings during the three-month period of 1972 were $8,380.000 or 40 cents a share.

The earnings were derived from revenues totalling $41,300,000 or 10 per cent more than those recorded a year earlier. A combination of increased sales and higher prices for some production largely accounted for the rise.

HBC

The annual report of Hudson's Bay Co. attributes substantial increases in sales and earnings to a buoyant demand for consumer goods and the company's programs to improve productivity and market participation.

Net earnings for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31 were $15,654,000 or $1.16 a share, compared with $13,990,000 or $1.03 a share the previous year. Sales increased to $672,157,000 from $558,553,000, a 20.3 per cent rise.

The report says 10 store openings have been announced for the next three years, including four in Toronto.

The directors' report says the company benefitted from a strong fur market and from higher demand for petroleum products. The report anticipates the economy will have a good rate of growth in 1973.

TSE Wants Insider Act Broadened

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange said today that anyone who uses confidential information to make a profit on the market should be liable to legal action.

It said the Ontario Securities Commission should have the authority to take action against those breaking the rules and that the courts should have the power to restrict or ban the trading privileges of offenders.

There are similar regulations now but they apply only to "insiders" — directors and officers of companies and those holding a relatively large number of shares.

The exchange said a submission to the commission on a proposed new Ontario Securities Act that only insiders as now defined are accountable for the misuse of confidential information.

RELATIVES

It said, for example that a relative of an insider, other than a spouse, son or daughter, would not be prohibited under the proposed act from using confidential information unless he shares the same home as the insider.

A lawyer, printer, accountant o rsecurities dealer also is not accountable for the misuse of such information obtained while performing a service for the company.

"If any of these individuals trade in the securities of the company using information which he knew or ought to have known was confidential, he is taking unfair advantage of a trading system based on the concept that information should be available to all participants," the exchange submission said.

Japan Adopts B.C. Sizes

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The British Columbia lumber industry is reported to be on the verge of a significant breakthrough in tapping the huge potential of the Japanese market.

By June the Japanese will have legislation in effect permitting large-scale purchases of standard size British Columbia lumber.

In the past, most of the market was in specially-cut lumber that once sawn could only be sold in Japan.

"Now we will have tremendous flexibility," says G. C. Edgett, vice-president in charge of lumber promotion for the Council of Forest Industries.

He predicted that sales to Japan will rise gradually until that market rivals the United States as purchasers of B.C. lumber.

The significance of the forecast is shown in that in 1972 British Columbia sold 67 per cent of its softwood production in the United States and less than 10 per cent in Japan.

"Potentially they could become almost equal markets," Edgett said. "The annual housing starts are about the same, although Japanese houses are smaller and use less lumber."

Housing starts in Japan are expected to average 1.9 million per year in the next five years. Most forecasts put housing starts at two million this year in the United States, down slightly from last year.

The new Japanese legislation will permit construction of houses at Canadian sizes through Canadian methods.

The Council of Forest Industries is spending $230,000 to construct three townhouse units in Japan to use as samples for Japanese purchasers.

The townhouses will be built on land leased from the Canadian government in Japan.

The value of the acre of land is about $500,000.

"That shows the value of land in Japan. It is very expensive, usually more expensive than the building on it," Edgett said.

Because of the expense and scarcity of land, B.C. lumber companies feel there is a great market for townhouses in Japan, despite the Japanese preference for single family homes.

"There is a great resistance to highrises in Japan. But townhouses with private gardens would catch on. We are confident there will be a tremendous market."

He said one of the units will be completed, a second will be 60 per cent finished inside and a third 40 per cent finished. This will show Japanese contractors the varying stages of construction.

Costs of the project will be recovered by CFI after a year by selling the townhouses to the Canadian government for staff housing in Japan.

Edgett sai da major factor in persuading the Japanese government to follow Canadian construction methods was the need for mass production to keep up with the housing boom there.

Traditional Japanese houses were small but constructed by highly-skilled craftsmen. There were not enough finished carpenters to meet the demand.

Dofasco Buys Prudential

CALGARY (CP)—Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. (Dofasco) of Hamilton has purchased all the shares of the privately owned Prudential Steel Ltd. of Calgary.

Financial details were not revealed.

Prudential is a pipe manufacturer specializing in electric resistance weld pipe for the oil and gas industry. It is also a major supplier of hollow structurals.

The company has a pipe-making plant on a 70-acre industrial site in southeast Calgary and owns a pipe-wrapping plant, Cardinal Tube Coatings Ltd.

Its major markets are in Western Canada and in the northwest United States.

Dofasco, with sales last year of $444 million, has a Canadian-owned subsidiary, National Steel Car, in Hamilton. It also has mining interests in Ontario, Labrador and the U.S. and a 45-per-cent interest in International Portable Pipe Mills Ltd. of Calgary.

Prudential will operate as a wholly owned subsidiary of Dofasco with John Sheppard as chairman. No management changes are anticipated and seven of the nine members of the board of directors will be from Alberta.

Weldwood Reports Record Quarter

VANCOUVER (CP) — Weldwood of Canada's net income for the first three months of 1973 was $3,504,000 or 69 cents a share compared with net income of $1,303,000 or 24 cents a share for the first quarter of 1972, president and chief executive officer Gordon Bowell told shareholders at the company's annual general meeting.

He reported first quarter sales in 1973 rose to a record $59,697,000 or 45 per cent higher than the $41,132,000 sales figure for the same period last yead.

Weldwood had a highly satisfactory year in 1972, he said.

In the annual report Weldwood said its net income increased in 1972 to $7.5 million or $1.41 a share from $2.6 million or 56 cents a share in 1971, when fewer shares were outstanding.

At the same time, sales reached $188 million or 24 per cent above 1971's sales of $151 million.

Bowell warned shareholders most forecasts indicate residential construction in both Canada and the U.S. will fall short of the record levels attained in 1972, but that there has been a marked increase in non-residential construction which is expected to continue throughout the year.

HIGHER WAGES

He also warned about increased logging costs in B.C. coastal waters, saying: "We are constantly striving for increased productivity but cannot develop enough improvement to offset higher wages that will come into effect in June."

New government guidelines, involving environmental protection, could increase logging costs by as much as 20 per cent, he said.

Under the new guidelines the cost of road-building can mount by as much as 75 per cent and the guidelines will force the closing of marginal logging camps, said Bowell.

The provincial government recently announced its intention to increase the corporation tax from 10 to 12 per cent and to introduce a new tax on capital employed.

ADEQUATE RETURN

"Admittedly, these increases are not major," said Bowell, "but added on top of all other taxes, they seem to indicate an unwillingness on the part of the government to recognize that the continuing prosperity of the province is largely dependent on our industry's capability to get an adequate return on capital employed in order to continue to expand and modernize its operations."

He said a 750-ton-a-day bleached krapt pulp mill, built and operated in equal partnership by Weldwood and Daishowa-Marubeni International Ltd. at Quesnel had been completed at a time when both demand and prices for pulp had strengthened considerably.

Bowell said the $81,023,000 cost of the mill was less than the budgeted figure set in 1970.

Montreal Ready With Rates

MONTREAL (CP) — A revised commision rate proposal will be submitted shortly to members of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, the president of the exchanges says.

The revised proposal will provide for lower rates on small trades and higher rates for large-volume transactions than those proposed by the Toronto Stock Exchange last January.

Michel Belanger told members of the Life Underwriters Association of Montreal that details of the new proposal will be released after they have been presented to members.

The Toronto proposal which would increase charges on small trades and reduce charges on large transactions, was accepted by both the Toronto and Vancouver exchanges but rejected by members of the Montreal exchanges.

Belanger gave no indication when the new rates will be sent to members for their approval.

Citizens' Action Group Lists Its Aims

Retired real estate dealer Monte Vanton vowed Tuesday to enrol 180,000 Greater Victoria residents in the newly-formed Citizens' Action Group.

Vanton and four other founding directors read a list of aims and objectives to an audience of 40, won over some volunteers to head the first of a hoped-for 50 committees and came away sure their non-partisan urban environmental organization will take off.

The inaugural meeting at the Empress Hotel was chaired by former Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC) leader Derrick Mallard, who read the list of aims and objectives, among which were to: —ensure the election of municipal candidates who exhibit environmental awareness and integrity, and gain a good turn-out in elections.

—establish co-ordination of all community groups and organizations on fundamental urban problems.

—challenge or oppose any municipal actions deemed contrary to the interests of the community.

—assist citizens under threat from municipal action.

"We want to provide a solid core of citizens to ensure that the blight affecting other cities does not affect Victoria, although some blight has already occurred," Mallard said.

"The Citizens' Action Group has no desire to usurp the autonomy of any other group. It will be an umbrella organization."

Lawyer Maurice Johnson said there would be six directors of the group, with affiliated directors from other fields.

The main form of liaison would be in committees ranging from "shadow councils" to research units investigating land developments, negligent planning, highrise buildings, signs, waterfront abuse, subdivision of land and other matters, he said.

Kay Lines, an executive member of James Bay Community Association, said she hoped women would be in the forefront of the group's activities.

Tony Mellor gave examples of municipal issues which he felt as a founding director the group could cite as examples of a need for the group's existence.

Vanton, who said he is a landed immigrant who lived in the United States for 25 years, said the concept of an umbrella organization was "born out of despair."

"Look back 10 years and see what has happened to Victoria," he said. "It has grown into a vulgar blatant sea of commercialism."

He gave three reasons:

Influence of the United States; trust of people in churches and local government, and the abdication of the peoples' responsibility; and the attitude and composition of city councils.

"City governments are subject to constant pressure, but that pressure is one-sided — it comes from business interests," he said.

A serious problem in city government is the absence of adversary proceedings in which a representative of the citizens could argue a case with developers before the advisory planning commission, he said.

Also, "we have an outmoded legacy of reliance on the church but the church says nothing, everybody believes advertisements, and experiences a sense of helplessness and disillusionment."

"Our salvation lies in people. We do not have to accept these conditions," he said.

It was agreed to set up committees and hold further meetings.

GUNFIRE WOUNDS 2 AT WOUNDED KNEE

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Government reinforcements circled Wounded Knee today following a heavy exchange of gunfire that wounded at least two and possibly six of the militant indians who have held this village 51 days.

A border patrolman from Montana said he and about 25 colleagues were brought in to aid the 300 U.S. marshals and FBI agents around the village after the 90-minute gunfire exchange Tuesday followed by sporadic shooting throughout the day.

An unidentified member of the estimated 150 Indians occupying Wounded Knee was in critical condition today after brain surgery in a Rapid City hospital. A supervisor at the hospital said the man suffered a gunshot would in the head.

A government spokesman said at least one other Indian was wounded during the exchange and no federal lawman was hit. Sources on the Pine Ridge Reserve said four other militants were wounded.

Interior department spokesman Charles Cadieux said the gunfire began two hours after daybreak mhen Indians shot at a government helicopter that was on a reconnaissance mission over the village perimeter.

The Justice department said negotiations are continuing over an FBI radio transmitter with leaders of the American Indian Movement who seized Wounded Knee Feb. 27.

Blood Clinic Better But Still Short

Turnout for the Red Cross blood clinic showed some improvement Tuesday, with a total of 172 donors, but still fell well short of the day's objective of 350.

The clinics today are at Victoria high school from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and at Royal Roads military college from 6:30 to 8:30 this evening. The public is welcome at both locations.

Thursday the clinic is at the Naden gymnasium, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

More than thirty new improvements.

This year, the '73 Plymouths are more beautiful than ever. But many of our important engineering improvements don't even show. And we count them as most important. They make the '73 Plymouths safer, quieter, smoother-riding and longer lasting than ever before. Extra care in engineering...it makes the difference.

Plymouth Valiant

Plymouth Fury

The '73 Plymouths

NEW Quieter Cars for 1973
The '73 Plymouths are the quietest cars we have ever made. Inside and out. Passenger compartments have been surrounded with sound insulating materials packed into critical areas of the cars body. Plymouth's Unibody helps too. The one-piece welded body and frame stays tight and quiet for years.
The major cause of noise in a car today is roadshock travelling up through the suspension and into the body of the car. To cut most of this noise we isolate the front and rear suspensions with rubber. Chrysler and Fury have had this quiet feature for some time. And we have now added this system to our Satellite line. Ask your Plymouth dealer to explain all the Chrysler Quiet features.

Electronic Ignition — Now Standard
Last year Chrysler introduced the Electronic Ignition system on some Plymouth models. Now it's standard on all 1973 Plymouth engines built in North America. The Electronic Ignition system eliminates breaker points and condenser. This means your engine will stay in tune longer and go further between tuneups. And it also means that your exhaust emissions will stay cleaner too.

NEW Emission Control Features
We're all working toward cleaner air. That's why all '73 Plymouth engines are equipped with an exhaust gas recirculation system and automatic vacuum spark advance control system, for controlling oxides of nitrogen. Also, we've added an electric assist choke to help reduce emissions during starting and warm-up.

NEW Higher Impact Bumpers
If you take a little bump, we want you to get off without a scratch. That's why we've added full length reinforcement members front and rear. And strengthened the existing front members. For even more protection, we've added rubber guards front and rear. They'll take quite a punch, without anything getting hurt.

Disc Brakes Standard on Most Cars
Disc brakes have greater fade resistance than conventional brakes. They perform more smoothly, stop your car in a straighter line, and are more effective at fast freeway speeds. Front disc brakes are now standard equipment on all Plymouth cars (except six-cylinder Valiants).

Dodge Club Cab

NEW Higher Speed Starter Motor
Quick starting is important, so we've developed a new, higher speed starter motor for our 1973 360, 400 and 440 cu. in. V8's. That, together with our Electronic Ignition, should give you one good start after another.

NEW Mechanical Plating Process
To help the exposed, critical safety parts on your new Plymouth stand up to the ruining effects of rust and corrosion, we've devised a new plating process that applies powdered particles of cadmium, tin or zinc to protect them. Every 1973 Plymouth has it.

NEW Electronic Engine Function Tester
Chrysler is dedicated to building cars and trucks to the highest quality control standards. To further raise the standard of Quality Control, we have introduced the Electronic Engine Function Tester. We call her "Miss EFT". Miss EFT tells us all about an engine when it's running. She tells us many things we couldn't find with conventional equipment. Engines that pass Miss EFT's test get a Quality Control Tag. She really helps us build better cars.
Here are just a few of the many engineering improvements made to the 1973 Plymouth models. Your Plymouth dealer will be happy to explain them all.

Two Teachers Await Appeal

Greater Victoria school board's appeal of a board of reference decision reinstating two teachers who were fired last summer has been delayed several months.

Meanwhile the two teachers, Miss Bona MacMurchie and Miss Evelyn Ball, are still not working and have had no income for over a year.

They were dismissed by Greater Victoria school board on July 15 for "neglect of duty," but appealed to a three-man provincial board of reference, which ruled they should be reinstated Oct. 4.

The school board immediately decided to appeal the decision and said the pair would not be rehired until the appeal is heard.

The appeal was scheduled to be heard this week but school board lawyer Brian Smith said procedures for the appeal must be established first.

SET RULES

He said both sides must first appear before the B.C. Court of Appeal to determine whether new evidence can be taken at the appeal hearing or whether the appeal will simply review evidence already taken at the board of reference hearing.

Smith said the school board will argue that new evidence should be allowed, but it may be a couple of months before they can appear before the court.

The two teachers, Miss MacMurchie at Margeret Jenkins Elementary and Miss Ball at Lampson Street Elementary, were fired after being absent from their teaching duties for most of the 1971-72 school year.

ON DOCTOR'S ORDER

In outlining the circumstances of the incident, the board of reference said the two women, who live together, were ill with infiluenza for several weeks and consulted their doctor who told them they should go to Arizona.

The two left for Phoenix on Nov. 9, 1971, and returned to Victoria last August.

The board of reference, made up of a B.C. Teachers' Federation representative, a B.C. School Trustees' Association representative and a lawyer, said they were satisfied the teachers took their doctor's advice seriously, that the women were ill during the entire time of their absence, and that "if a teacher is ill to the extent of being unable to perform teaching duties, then such a teacher is not required to apply for a leave of absence."

Lloyd MacKenzie is counsel for the teachers and the BCTF is paying legal costs incurred by the two women.

Miss MacMurchie, who has taught for Greater Victoria school board for over 30 years, says she and Miss Ball are "just working around the house doing gardening."

She said they have had no income since their sick leave ran out over a year ago while they were still in Phoenix.

VICTORIA ON FILM

A series of half-hour television shows depicting elements of Victoria from a community-oriented point of view will be aired by Cable 10 Television for six weeks starting April 26 at 10 p.m.

The shows are produced by a $27,000 Local Initiatives Project called The Videosyncrasy Association which started two months ago.

Anne Bayin, a spokesman for the 12-member association, said the series will depict the community in "the broadest sense of the word."

Show titles are: David Anderson in conversation; Social Art '73; a portrayal of Emily Carr; vignettes from the recent Bill 42 demonstration at the legislature; a recent speech by Agriculture Minister David Stupich; a short on Little Raven Kindergarten and aerial footage of Victoria.

The producers, she added, will also draw from community video-tapes the association has made since January — tapes including activities of Victoria Community School and the Victoria Women's Centre.

The grant was awarded the association to provide a community video-tape service accessible for training and education of community group members.

Thief's Dive Re-Enacted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man convicted of breaking and entering a service station demonstrated in British Columbia Supreme Court how he attempted to flee the building by diving through a window and was then shot when he collided with a waiting RCMP officer.

James Corbett, who served six months for breaking into a Quesnel service station on Christmas Eve, 1969, re-enacted the scene with the aid of Constable R. F. A. Lambert, whom he is suing for alleged negligence in handling his service revolver.

Mr. Justice Kirke Smith reserved decision.

Corbett said he was inside the station when he saw an RCMP officer outside pointing a gun at him and motioning to halt. He said he waved back and then dived hands first through the waist-high window, landed on his hands and did a forward somersault.

He said the next thing he knew he was lying on the ground with a bullet in his chest and a different RCMP officer was standing over him.

Death of a Hamburger Crime of the Century

The mother of a disgruntled teen-ager in Gravesend, England, has put the girl on a week-long diet, using the wartime British ration, to show the young lady how lucky she is to be living in this day of unrestricted food supplies.

That is as much of the brief item on the CBC news that I remember, but I expect every parent of my vintage, especially those who were in Britain in the war years and with a memory of how good those three eggs a week used to taste, or that occasional rasher of bacon or the once-a-month roast, will be applauding. "That'll show the rotten kid what we went through," they'll be saying.

You'll be wondering, I suppose, what this has to do with my subject today, which concerns my search for a real, old-fashioned hamburger, but I want to make the point that the young person of today knows deprivation of a kind that, even in the darkest years of the war, we simply never had to endure. The young person of today, to get right down to it, has simply never tasted a genuine hamburger and is never likely to. It is one of the great scandals of our times.

For better than two months now I have carried out a systematic survey of the hamburger outlets of these climes, notably the chain-owned drive-ins that claim it as a specialty. My original intention was to list these places by name and to provide a detailed, analytical, ingredient-by-ingredient autopsy on their hamburgers. I have now abandoned that notion as too repetitive since each of these hamburgers — 16, to be precise — were all but identical in content and all but identical in taste, namely unbelievably awful.

It is not a nice thing to do — and may permanently ruin your appetite for the rest of your life — but I have looked under the hide, so to speak, of these test hamburgers and have found a truly frightful mess of pickle, relish, mayonnaise, tomato and lettuce. In the case of the two leading franchise outlets there is an extra mysterious ingredient, possibly patented, which I strongly suspect to be LePage's Library Paste.

In each case, as well, there has been a token wafer of the material from which the hamburger gets its name. The coroner's report is not yet in, but the circumstantial evidence suggests that this membrane may actually contain some form of meat product or derivative, such as leather, but since it has been grilled to the consistency of Naugahide its taste does not intrude on the lettuce, relish, etc.

In those distant days when the hamburger was a truly noble creation, before it became the Firenza of short order specialties, it consisted of exactly four ingredients.

There was an enormous slab of the meat, itself, a thick hoop of succulent Spanish Onion, a smear of mustard and, of course, the bun lightly toasted on the griddle. If someone then had asked for relish or lettuce or anything else that might bruise the heavenly collaboration of beef and onion he would have been killed dead on the spot. No jury would have found for anything but justifiable homicide.

★ ★ ★

One hotly-debated variation of this combination was pioneered by the Tomahawk Drive-In, on Marine Drive in North Vancouver, where the owner-chef, Chic, was not merely widely known for his hamburgers, but revered. Chic had a back-room counter for customers who had demonstrated their loyalty, an honor only slightly less sought-after than the Order of the British Empire. Chic had shaken the very foundations of the hamburger world by substituting mushrooms for the Spanish Onion, but since this was before the day when modern science had totally removed the taste from the mushroom the innovation was condoned and eventually accepted.

What seems clear is that the franchise sellers, who have been so relentless in ruining the pleasures of casual, simple food, have had their way with the hamburger. Clearly their cost accountants discovered very early that the profit could be put into the hamburger by simply removing the meat and substituting garbage and that the profits, when put into slick, high-pressure advertising, would bring in the adolescent customer who knows no better.

The result we all know. The hallowed hamburger of the past is dead, but they will not let it rest in peace.

Community Rallies When Trap Springs

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Blair Peden, 23, of 4929 Prospect Lake Road, has found his dog — dead.

She was in a camouflaged grave on a neighbor's property, shot and bearing the vicious marks of a spring trap.

The University of Victoria student's dog had been missing since April 2.

A friendly 20-month-old German Shepherd cross, Chinook was well known to neighbors. They helped Peden search for her. Peden inserted newspaper ads offering a reward. He had notices posted at the local store.

One of Peden's neighbors, Ted Hart of 4915 Prospect Lake Road, discovered the grave.

"It was really hidden," he said, "covered over with grass clippings, garden refuse and pine boughs."

Saanich police were called in. Indignant members of the Prospect Lake Community Association gathered at Hart's house. An autopsy was carried out on Chinook by Dr. A. J. L. Bonnell.

Hart, Peden and others said the trap had been set about 60 feet from the road on unfenced property and baited with a dead bird.

Dr. Andy Kerr, PLCA vice-president and father of three small children, said this kind of trap also could injure small children.

"Children can't read No Trespassing signs any better than dogs can," he observed. "This kind of trap could wreck a child's arm or leg."

Policemen agreed that the type of trap is dangerous in a built-up area like Prospect Lake where dogs and children roam freely.

They said they had "suggested" to the man who had laid the trap (to catch raccoons that threatened his poultry) that he use the more humane "live" trap.

They pointed out, however, the trap-setter was within his legal rights to set them on his own property and there was no law that required a more humane type of trap.

They told Peden and his neighbors the dog had been shot because the trapper and a friend had felt she was too far gone to recover when they found her.

But Dr. Bonnell said the autopsy indicated she would have been "treatable".

On Monday Peden buried Chinook in the shady spot where she used to wait for his return from university.

But the PLCA will push for legislation that will stop the risk of the same thing happening to children and other pets. After an emergency meeting, president Jack Whitehead said "We're not going to let this thing just slide by."

He said the executive decided not to hold a public meeting so "tempers could cool off a bit" but members will ask Mayor Hugh Curtis to work for better legislation.

They will also rally behind Garde Gardom (Liberal-Vancouver-Point Grey) in his efforts to get a private member's bill passed, restricting the use of spring traps.

Sex Shop Nix Almost Sure

Kelly Covin, of Ultra-Love Products Ltd., of Vancouver, has applied for a business licence which has been directed to the city's finance committee for consideration Thursday because of its controversial nature.

The company is inviting applications for franchises in the Victoria area, but one member of city council, who did not want to be named, said approval of a business licence was unlikely, because the operation was deemed "inappropriate."

Asked by reporters if he thought a neignboring municipality would promptly approve such a business, he said Victoria could do without the trade.

Covin says stores selling Ultra-Love goods, which range from water beds through sensuary stimulation equipment to contraceptives, are open in Vancouver, New Westminster, Calgary, Edmonton and Toronto.

In his application, Covin says Victoria police looked at his catalogue and advised that it is against federal law to sell contraceptives.

The information "will probably come as a shock to the companies advertising on radio station CJVI and in the business personals columns of the daily newspapers," said Covin of Durrance Road in the Victoria area.

(Contraceptive companies have also placed display advertisements in Victoria daily papers.)

"Nevertheless we will scratch the contraceptives part of the catalogue and not sell or advertise them," Covin said, adding that as new products and lines were introduced they would be cleared with both police and city council.

"Our intention is to cooperate every step of the way for several reasons, not the least of which is to avoid any possibility of hassle."

The company's illustrated catalogue, which has circulated in a brown paper envelope among city officials for several weeks, lists among its products such items as Orgy Cream, Intimate Hair Oil, Cupid's Quiver, Emotion Lotion and Love Jell in lemon, green-grape, strawberry and peach.

When they approved a store in Vancouver, city officials described Ultra-Love as "... an enterprise that specializes in space-age sexual technology, including water beds, incomprehensible elastic contrivances and mysterious balms."

Diphtheria Strikes Two More

Two new cases of diphtheria have been confirmed in Greater Victoria, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said today.

Both patients, a man and a young girl, are in hospital and in good condition, said the senior public health officer for Greater Victoria.

But they underline again the need for parents to make sure their children have been immunized.

A public health immunization program is available through well baby clinics for infants and school children receive booster shots where parents grant permission. The program covers about 80 per cent of children.

Whitbread said where parents know their children have not been immunized or are uncertain, further information is available from the clinics operated by the metro health board throughout the region.

The clinics and their phone numbers: Victoria at 385-3351; Saanich at 386-3251; Oak Bay at 598-3311; Langford at 478-1757; Sooke at 642-3122; Sidney at 656-1188 and Ganges on Salt Spring Island at 537-5424.

Unequal Treatment Of Women Cited In BCTF Report

By LINDA HUGHES, Times Staff

It extends to the "policies and attitudes of the Department of Education, the BCTF, the local school boards and individual teachers," the 18-page report says.

The report, presented to the BCTF executive by the four-woman task force headed by Campbell River Senior Secondary School vice-principal Dorothy Glass, and just made public, contains an analysis of the status of women in B.C. education and makes 46 recommendations to improve that status.

"As teachers," the task force reported, "we are part of an education system which supports and maintains the status quo by inculcating values that perpetuate rigid role differences.

"Children are taught society's concept of what is masculine and feminine. Prescribed textbooks and other school literature provide socially acceptable models which stress qualities of independence and leadership for boys and dependence and passivity for girls.

"It is no wonder then," the report continues, "that female teachers being products of this same educational system should tend to under-estimate their human potential and ability to act on it."

The report says there are only 83 women among the provinces 1,223 principals and head teachers.

Full-Time Guardian

There are 75 district superintendents and 61 instruction directors in the province and none of these top supervisory positions are filled by women.

While women form the majority of teachers in the province (53 per cent), the ratio of men to women in the BCTF executive is 10-to-1 and men outnumber women 74 to nine in the position of local teacher association president.

The major recommendation of the report, which will go to a vote at the BCTF annual convention next week, urges that a BCTF member be appointed biennially "to work full time towards an improvement of the status of women in the government of the federation and in education in B.C."

It points out that, from information gathered in 47 school districts, women outnumber men 25-to-1 in primary education, while men outnumber in secondary education.

"Children should be exposed to teachers of both sexes at all levels of education," says the report, adding that women choose primary education more often because of "previous motivational conditioning".

"Some men have expressed a desire to work in the primary area," the report says, "but have been discouraged from doing this."

Ransacking Labelled 'Cover Job'

Whoever broke into Can-Am Investigations Ltd., overnight Monday was looking for confidential information not cash, manager John Dewar said today.

The firm's 3,000 confidential files were scattered about the ransacked office at 483 Burnside but none were missing. Spent flashbulbs were found in a filing cabinet.

"The point was not to take the files but to photograph them," said Dewar. "It looks like a cover job."

The offenders had two choices, says Dewar. They could have carefully picked the locks on the doors, photographed the files, and left the office tidy.

They chose the second method. The office was ransacked and a small amount of cash was stolen, making it look like a normal robbery. Dewar's convinced it was a professional job.

Fingerprints were taken by a Victoria police identification officer and Can-Am's own fingerprint man

"We're eliminating the staff and clients who have been in for legitimate reasons," said Dewar.

The company has been working on several marriage of convenience cases, concerning illegal immigrants into Canada, as well as insurance frauds.

Sooke Park Enlarged

The Capital Regional District has purchased for $123,000 two more parcels of waterfront land for East Sooke Park.

The purchase, announced Tuesday, will allow visitors to walk five miles along a natural scenic coastline.

A 110-acre tract was bought from Fred King of Calgary. It includes half a mile of waterfront, coves, beachlands and scenic Beechey Head on the east side of the park.

The district also acquired Iron Mine Bay and property immediately behind it from Mrs. M. R. May of California. It includes 800 feet of waterfront and a small island.

Amount paid for each of the parcels was not disclosed.

Oak Bay mayor Frances Elford, chairman of the regional parks committee, said the region now has a park unique and "far superior to any in the Greater Vancouver metropolitan area."

"It is the largest waterfront park on the east coast of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands," she said. "It is only a half-hour drive from a population of 200,000."

She said visitors can now walk from Iron Mine Bay on the west wing of the park to Aylard farm on the east side, a distance of five miles. Aylard farm was purchased last year.

What Kind of a Critter Is It?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

When is a boat not a boat?

Bert Buchanan's Limpet was dreamed up by Bill Garden, well known marine architect whose headquarters is at Toad's Landing near Sidney.

But North Saanich authorities aren't convinced the Limpet is a sea creature. In fact, municipal inspector of services T. A. Crack has posted a stop-work order on Buchanan's dream boat, now partially built on his Lochside Drive property.

Buchanan said Tuesday the inspector has now asked for plans of the Limpet in order to determine what sort of creature she actually is — land or marine.

Garden, who is known throughout North America for both his traditional and advanced boat designs, said the Limpet is capable of becoming a summer home on land and water; she is a houseboat that can be taken ashore at the whim of her owner.

With an 11½-foot beam, the 24-foot craft draws 2½ feet. She can be powered by a 10-horsepower outboard or towed. Adjustable legs allow her to be beached readily, even on uneven ground.

Hewett says one of her greatest advantages is she can be built and equipped with drapes, carpets, chemical toilet, sink and other necessities for less than $1,000.

"She's a very inexpensive living capsule and her adjustable legs are not really that new. Many years ago some sailboats had legs screwed on to their bottoms."

The Limpet's frame is plywood and cedar, her roof is fiberglass and her doors will be aluminum. Completed, she'll weigh in at about 1,500 pounds, well under the 3,500 flotation capacity of her four styrofoam blocks.

Buchanan — if and when the stop-work order is lifted — has asked North Saanich council for six months grace in which to finish building his unconventional craft.

An avid sailor, he owns the 25-foot sloop Lairig Ghru. Buchanan hopes to anchor or beach the Limpet in some of the many Gulf Island spots he's become familiar with.

He and Hewett see the Limpet design as a means of beating the high costs of materials and labor for those who want to combine land and sea living in their leisure hours.

As Hewett says, "After all, there's no law I know that demands a boat has to be seaworthy enough to go to Hawaii!"

When the stop-work order was first imposed, Buchanan was told North Saanich council would deliberate on the problem Monday night.

Instead, he says, he was informed Tuesday that it would be treated as an "internal matter" by municipal officials.

'Big Bird' of Habs Right on Target

MONTREAL (CP) — The Big Bird came through for Montreal Canadiens Tuesday night in the second game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series against Philadelphia Flyers.

The Big Bird—Larry Robinson—drilled a shot past Philadelphia goaltender Doug Favell at 6:45 of the first overtime period to give Montreal a 4-3 win and even the series at 1-1.

Yvan Cournoyer, Guy Lafleur and Henri Richard scored the other Montreal goals. Andre Dupont, Gary Dornhoefer and Bill Flett scored for Philadelphia, who play host to the Canadiens at the Spectrum in game No. 3 Thursday night.

"I fooled everybody including myself," said Robinson, who picked up the 'Big Bird nickname up at the Canadiens' Laurentian resort hideaway.

"I could say I was aiming for the top corner, but I'd be lying. I was trying to shoot at the net to make the goalie make the glove save.

GOING TO PASS

"I was going to pass to Frank (Mahovlich), but he told me to go, go. I put everything I had on the shot. I gave it a lot of wood."

Robinson, who lives in Metcalfe, Ont., a community just south of Ottawa, said he poked the puck off Gary Dornhoefer and it came off the boards back to him.

"It was a pass from Larry to Larry," he chuckled.

Robinson said he felt Favell might have been screened on the shot but when Canadiens' coach Scotty Bowman showed a videotape replay of the goal after the game, it appeared Favell made a move on it and was cleanly beaten.

The Flyers' goaltender had little to say to reporters on the matter except that he saw the shot and it dropped.

Bowman took great pains to explain that Dornhoefer was the "goat" on the goal.

"The key play on the goal was made by Dornhoefer," the coach said. "He waved at Larry in front of our bench. If he takes him out, there's no way he gets over the blueline.

"I mention that because all they talk about over on the other side is taking the man out. Instead of doing that, he turned to the inside.

"I don't think we would have ever tied it up in the third period if they hadn't had Schultz covering (Yvan) Cournoyer."

"He should be more careful with what he says about other team's players," Clarke snapped. "If he's such a brilliant coach, how come they didn't win the first game?

"Every time you come in here, Scotty is making some comment about one of the players on the other team. He has enough problems with his own team. Nobody likes him."

The game was rougher than the opening game of the series Saturday, won 5-4 by Philadelphia. Referee Bruce Hood kept thing fairly well under control and assessed 10 minors, six to the Flyers.

In addition, Schultz and Montreal's Serge Savard got fighting majors in the first period and Savard picked up an eight-stitch cut. Lafleur and Bill Barber were also given majors for a second period fight.

Montreal defenceman Jacques Laperriere had to leave the game in the second period when his groin injury started acting up again. That gave The Big Bird his big chance and he proved he was more than ready.

Reay Won't Allow His Gang to Brag

NEW YORK (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks scalped New York Rangers 2-1 to go one up after three games in their National Hockey League semi-final series Tuesday night, but coach Billy Reay wasn't about to let his tribe brag about it.

Reay, in his usual quiet way, praised goals by Jim Pappin and Stan Mikita that made the victory possible and the superb goaltending of Tony Esposito, who turned aside 37 of 38 New York shots.

tempted to interview the victors, Reay barked that writers could talk only to the player designated spokesman J. P. Bordeleau.

Bordeleau, a French-speaking youngster from Noranda, Que., had as much difficulty fielding some of the questions from writers as the Rangers did moving the puck into the Black Hawk end of the ice in the face of fierce Chicago forechecking.

The 23-year-old winger, who saw little ice time during the game and apologized "for my English not being so good," admitted the breaks were in Chicago's favor.

Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin made a key stop on John Marks' 25-foot shot but was unable to control the puck and Mikita, who had set up the rookie winger's shot, was on hand to tap in the rebound.

"It could have been the other way around," Bordeleau said of the Chicago breaks.

Reay said he couldn't understand why anyone should be surprised that Chicago is suddenly looking the aggressor in the series after starting against the Rangers as underdogs.

"We've been playing this way all year," he said.

Walt Tkaczuk tallied in the second period to give the Rangers a 1-1 tie—his seventh goal in eight post-season games to tie him with Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal Canadiens as top goal scorer of the playoffs.

Ranger coach Emile Francis, though obviously shaken by the setback when he left the players' bench after the game, appeared to take the loss more lightly than did Ready the victory.

He said Giacomin "was like an octopus" smothering the Chicago offence and "didn't have much of a chance on the goals he allowed."

"Home ice seems to be a disadvantage to us," Francis

The Rangers won three of their four victories in the quarter-finals on Boston ice and opened this best-of-seven series with a win at Chicago.

"Maybe we should move to Boston," Francis added.

GAME FIVE DELAYED

The series continues here Thursday at 9:05 p.m. EST. The fifth game, originally scheduled for Chicago Sunday, has been moved back to next Tuesday to allow the other semi-final series between Montreal Canadiens and Philadelphia Flyers to catch up.

That series is tied at 1-1.

Despite the clamp on Chicago players, Marks and Mikita shed a little light on their payoff score before reverting back to the gag imposed by Reay.

"It was a mediocre shot," Marks recalled.

"I just shovelled it back in," said Mikita.

Sid Shuffles To Kansas City

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sid Abel, a hockey Hall of Famer as a player who later gained extensive experience as a club executive, was named general manager Tuesday of the Kansas City team which will begin play in the National Hockey League in the 1974-75 season.

Abel, 55, resigned as general manager of the NHL's St. Louis Blues and officially assumes the new post June 1.

Edwin G. Thompson, president of the franchise, said at a news conference that Abel was signed to a three-year contract and will have free rein with the organization in matters concerning hockey, including the selection of a coach.

Abel said he has someone in mind for the coaching spot, but "a coach isn't what I'm looking for now."

In St. Louis, Sidney Salomon Jr., The Blues' president, said Thompson had requested permission several weeks ago to speak with Abel. Solomon said he regretted seeing Abel leaving, "but we knew the excitement and challenge of organizing an entirely new team would be of tremendous interest to him and we did not want to stand in his way."

Thompson said Abel will be a limited partner with an investment ranging from one to two per cent.

Abel, 20 when he broke into the league with Detroit, was team captain by the time he was 24. He gained his reputation as the Red Wing's centre on a line with Gordie Howe at right wing and Ted Lindsay on the left.

Five years later he was back in Detroit as coach and was named general manager of the Red Wings in 1962, a post he held until moving to St. Louis in 1971.

Abel quit the Red Wings because of a feud over Norris' choice of Ned Harkness, former Cornell University hockey coach, as Detroit's coach.

Tom Morris: Dedication, Rigid Training and Bluff

bill walker

Duties of a draftsman in the Department of Public Works may be rather stereotyped, but they are also very precise. The very nature of the position demands it.

Tom Morris has exactly the same approach to sport. If anything, he may be more dedicated.

Almost every day after work he goes for a ride — on his bicycle. On weekends they are rarely parted.

Tom Morris is a bicycle rider, one of the best in Canada, a representative at the Olympics in Munich last summer, off to Britain this week for more international competition, and obviously coveting a berth on Canada's cycling team to the world championships in Spain later this year.

Morris came to Victoria from Scotland where he learned to ride as a youth. He isn't a muscular giant in the mold of Victoria's former racing great, Torchy Peden. Rather he is a modest, soft-spoken young man of 28 with wavy, brown hair, and pleasant eyes which belý his tremendous competitive urge. And he rides because it is his true love, and "I think I am still improving."

If Morris resided in France, or Belgium, or England, he would likely be a household name. But here his achievements are mostly anonymous. "People just don't understand about bicycle racing, and the Olympics," he says. "It's not their fault, they've been brought up on other sports."

Last summer at Munich, Canada's four-man team for the Olympic time trial, which he captained, finished 22nd. He was 62nd in the individual road race. He feels he could have done better, but thought some of the pre-race training techniques were wrong. He wasn't bitter, just disappointed. "In France, before the games, the team had done very well," he said.

Last weekend in Vancouver, he lost to his personal nemesis, Max Grace beat him by inches. "I went flying by him just over the line," Morris said. "I don't think I've ever beaten Max in a sprint," he admitted. But I have won from him in road events.

"He has the ability, is a cunning rider, and last year won the national," Morris complimented his talented rival. It was clear Grace was his mark for the future.

So, it's fun to ride. Hundreds do. Or would you like the weekly Morris program: Monday — a loosening up (after weekend action), a low-gear ride, 20 miles; Tuesday — training with the club team, sprints, hard riding, 50 miles; Wednesday — a ride alone, hilly circuits, another 50 miles; Thursday — club night, 50-60 miles; Friday — evening of rest. Saturday — competition or 50-70 miles easy riding; Sunday — usually a race, from 25 to 100 miles.

★ ★ ★

In winter, it's running, weight-training and skiing, downhill and cross country.

This fall, he will get little time off because of the Commonwealth Games in New Zealand early in 1974.

This week, on Friday, it's a 40-mile road race in Toronto; Sunday and Monday a two-day event of 123 miles in Kent, England; on April 27-28-29, the Greenall Whitley Grand Prix with three other members of the B.C. team, Roger Summer, George Streadwick and Hugh Hardin; a 40-mile short circuit criterium at Birkinhead, May 1; the Harry Quinn 33-mile road race on May 3, to be followed by the Zerny two-day event at Hull, May 5-6.

That's how Morris will spend two weeks of his annual vacation, punishing himself, for sport and personal satisfaction.

There is some financial assistance, but many costs he will bear himself, as he does at times during the regular season.

If bicycle racing appears rather complicated to the lay spectator in Canada, it nevertheless is catching on in appeal. "There were hundreds lining the roadside on the mainland last week," Morris said, "and there were 120 entries in the various classifications. A few years ago this never would have happened. There is also a "Club Canada" for cyclists which is composed of the eight top riders at present with eight more to be added this summer.

Tom could talk all day on the technical aspects of the sport: "drafting," riders taking turns free-wheeling behind the leader; teamwork, how championship teams work together." A team going uphill can do it faster than one rider," he explained. "That's when you have to be wary, and not let anyone sprint into a long lead.

As for bicycles, "they are all about the same," he said. "It's a bike, and I ride it," he remarked philosophically, even though his team rides under the sponsorship of Fred Deely.

The real secret to success?

"It's a game of bluff — between you and the other guy. Sure, there's pain and anguish, but you can't let him know you're suffering. When he goes by you, you come right back and take him.

"And you have to tell yourself too, that you can go on. "Sometimes, it's amazing just how far you can go."

Blades Will Have a Rest As Rivals Continue Duel

By The Canadian Press

Saskatoon Blades will have the advantage of a good rest when they start play in the Western Hockey League final after winning the Eastern Division title Tuesday in shutout style.

They defeated Flin Flon Bombers 5-0 to win the series 4-1 while in Medicine Hat the Tigers bombed Edmonton Oil Kings 8-1 to tie the Western Division final 2-2. That best-of-seven series will need at least two more games before the victor is decided.

Saskatoon hung on to the 2-0 lead through the scoreless second period with Dennis Abgrall, Pat Price and Walker, with his second, scoring in the final frame.

Humphreys made 22 saves in posting his third shutout in 11 playoff appearances. He led the league goaltenders in the regular season with five shutouts.

Flin Flon took seven of 10 minor penalties and the only majors called went to Greg Robinson of Flin Flon and Pat Rooney of Saskatoon in the third period for fighting.

At Medicine Hat, the Tigers exploded for six unanswered goals in the second period to earn to min. It was their second victory on home ice after dropping two to the Oil Kings in Edmonton. The third game in the series is scheduled tonight in Edmonton.

Ken Gassoff led the Tigers with two goals with Ed Johnstone, Boyd Anderson, Barry Dean, Tom Lysiak, Dick Jellema and Brad Gassoff adding the others.

Rocky Maze scored Edmonton's lone goal, beating Jerry Thomas in the Tigers' net at 6:46 of the final period.

Tigers held a 1-0 lead after the first period and a commanding 7-0 margin after 40 minutes of play.

Ken to Play With 'New Hand'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ken Venturi says his "new hand" is strong enough for him to renew the golf career that once was so billiant he was called the next Ben Hogan.

"In August 1970, they gave me a new hand," Venturi said. "It's taken up until now to feel normal. It takes time for the nerves to adjust."

Venturi regained use of his right hand after a delicate operation to remove scar tissue in his wrist. He said he plans to rejoin the Professional Golfers' Association tour for the Byron Nelson tournament later this month in Texas.

Venturi, 42 next month, won the 1964 U.S. Open, nearly won the Masters three times and in his first eight years won 15 tournaments.

Then his career appeared ended. He couldn't swing a club properly.

"It was trauma from beating so many golf balls," he said. "It caused thickening of the bands in my wrists, putting pressure on nerves."

An operation to relieve the pressure by rechanneling nerves fixed both hands but the right hand improved only temporarily.

"I had atrophy of the right hand—it shrunk. It was good for a while, but it fluctuated in strength. It was just no good."

Three surgeons operated for 3½ hours to remove scar tissue from his right wrist in 1970. In 1971, "I came back and played in just a few tournaments, but it just wasn't right so I left the tour again. I was like a one-handed golfer."

HAS JOBS

Venturi, head professional at Mission Hills Golf and Country Club near this desert resort, entered the Bing Crosby Pro-Am this year, but withdrew when his mother died.

Venturi doesn't need to play on the tour for the money. He has a television contract, a golf club manufacturing business and his position at Mission Hills.

So why tackle the rigors of the pro tour?

"It's been frustrating," he said. "I love competition. I love to be head-to-head against someone coming down to the wire. I love it."

New Job for Johnny

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs, who didn't do badly under colorful Punch Imlach who they unloaded four years ago, Tuesday announced the resignation of his successor, John McLellan.

McLellan's four years as coach of the National Hockey League club were largley undistinguished. The Leafs missed the playoffs twice and were knocked out in the Stanley Cup quarter-finals the other two years.

This season Toronto struggled to a sixth-place finish in the eight-team East Division while Imlach, who coached the Leafs to four Stanley Cups and missed the playoffs only once in 11 years, was building a potential powerhouse as general manager in Buffalo.

The Sabres, only in their third year in the league, made the playoffs this year and are being touted as one of the future powers.

Jim Gregory, Leaf general manager, told a news conference Tuesday that McLellan had resigned, but would stay with the club to "work as an executive."

He said a new coach has not yet been hired.

He added that McLellan will act as a scout for the Maple Leafs although "his new duties have not been completely defined."

Considered leading contenders for McLellan's job are George Armstrong and Red Kelly, both former Maple Leaf players.

Blaze Orange Clothing Should Be Compulsory

We are categorically in favor of regulations making it mandatory for big game hunters in British Columbia to wear blaze orange clothing.

In a memorandum recently sent out to all instructors in the fish and wildlife branch's hunter training program, branch director Jim Hatter stressed the need for compulsory clothing regulations and backed up his stand with some interestng facts.

"You will recall that in last year's hunting regulations there was a notice of our intention to recommend to the government that we institute a compulsory blaze orange clothing regulation for big game hunters this year.

"The enclosed material includes a letter that is being sent to the presidents of all rod and gun clubs in the province. My hope is that when the issue comes before the B.C. Wildlife Federation convention in May the delegates will be better informed than they have in the past," writes Hatter.

Resolutions containing this proposal have either been shelved or turned down time and again at the convention.

"There is now proof that normal and intelligent human beings, expert or tyro, man or woman, do upon occasion see deer where no deer exists," states the background material.

This phenomenon, called "early blur", stems from an unconscious need or desire to fill in missing details and compose a complete picture out of incomplete data.

And in hunting, the conditions for experiencing early blur are excellent — perhaps with fatal consequences for another hunter envisioned as a deer. Most hunters are afield when the grey-washed light of early dawn or dusk softens details.

Think how easy it would be, particularly while keyed up for the hunt to begin with, to mistake a carelessly displayed handkerchief for the flash of a deer's tail or branches behind a man's head for antlers.

Make no mistake, it has happened. And although the list of hunting accidents cannot really be compared to the vast toll of lives taken in traffic accidents, they are still a blight on the sport.

From 1967 to 1971 in B.C. there were 118 firearms casualties, including 26 (or 22 per cent) in the mistaken-for-game category.

Fluorescent blaze orange clothing tends to shatter early blur illusions before they can take shape because the color is so vivid it dispels all animal clues.

Wearing of at least a cap and vest of blaze orange for hunting big game is already mandatory in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Montana, Colorado, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and possibly other states. It is a statistical fact that mistaken-for-game accidents dropped radically or were entirely eliminated upon institution of clothing regulations.

Among the arguments most frequently encountered against the use of compulsory measures are that persons not wearing the clothing would be more likely to be shot, that fluorescent colors spook game, that the plastic or nylon materials presently associated with fluorescent clothing are noisy in the bush, that responsibility for wearing protective clothing should rest with the hunter and that rights of individual freedom would be violated.

Hunters, almost without exception, were victims of other hunters in the B.C. cases of mistaken identity. So is there any reason to assume that non-hunters, whose hours and behavior are usually different from hunters in any case, would automatically become targets?

Deer are color blind but may see fluorescent colors as lighter than regular colors — a factor greater skill may overcome — and surely present technology is capable of eliminating the noise factor.

As far as responsibilities and freedom are concerned, the saving of even one human life should take precedence.

Especially since such "freedom" is so tiny in comparison to the other considerations.

Tom Seaver's Theory: Scoring Yields Victory

By The Associated Press

"You've got to score to win," the New York Mets' ace said Tuesday after being outpitched by Ferguson Jenkins, who hurled a two-hitter and retired the last 18 batters as Chicago Cubs made off with a 1-0 victory.

Seaver, who rarely gets any batting support, also is perceptive.

"I noticed from the first inning that we didn't score any runs," he added.

In his three outings this season, Seaver has been matched against Steve Carlton of Philadelphia Phillies, Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals and Jenkins.

The Mets went wild in his first start, mauling Carlton for three runs in a 3-0 victory. They exploded for two in the first inning of a 2-1 triumph over Gibson and that's the last time Seaver has had any runs to work with.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates edged St. Louis 4-3 in 14 innings, Philadelphia outslugged Montreal Expos 9-6, Cincinnati Reds blanked San Diego Padres 3-0, San Francisco Giants took a doubleheader from Atlanta Braves 15-2 and 2-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers trimmed Houston Astros 7-2.

Seaver, who allowed five hits, breezed through the first nine Cub batters before Rick Monday hammered the first pitch of the fourth inning over the right field fence for the game's only run.

Pittsburgh reached Bob Gibson for a 3-0 lead in the first inning but had to wait until the 14th and Dave Cash's run-scoring single to make the victory over St. Louis official. Reliever Alan Foster walked Gene Alley to open the 14th and Gene Clines sacrificed before Cash laced his decisive single to left field.

Tommy Hutton's two-run pinch double highlighted a four-run rally in the eighth inning that carried Philadelphia past Montreal.

With two out, Mike Anderson singled and Mike Ryan tripled to tie the score against Montreal relief ace Mike Marshall. Terry Harmon walked and Hutton greeted Tom Walker with a double and scored on Larry Bowa's single.

The Expos piled up a 6-1 lead, one run coming on Ron Fairly's second homer of the season, but the Phillies chopped it to 6-5 with four in the seventh, capped by Cesar Tovar's RBI double.

Oliva Pinch-Hit Role Perfect for Walton

By The Associated Press

Tony Oliva, always a potent man with a bat but less than agile in the field because of knee ailments, was made for the role of designated hitter in the American League.

But going into the bottom of the seventh inning Tuesday, with Minnesota Twins trailing California Angels 3-1 and trying to get something going, Oliva thought perhaps someone else might be better suited for the job.

He ambled over to Twins' manager Frank Quilici in the dugout.

Quilici nodded, and a few minutes later, he nodded again. The Twins had cut the California lead to 3-2. Steve Barber, a left-hander, had come on in relief of Bill Singer for the Angels, the bases were loaded and Oliva was due up.

It was Danny Walton who got the nod this time.

"It doesn't bother me to be pinch-hit for," said Oliva, who had never been pinch-hit for in his major league career. "I know when I can hit and when I can't."

Quilici obviously knew when Walton could hit.

"I was just thinkipg fly ball," the pinch-hitter said.

That's what he hit, too, except it landed in the left field seats, a grand-slam home run that highlighted an eight-run explosion and carried Minnesota to a 10-5 victory.

In other American League games, Chicago White Sox beat Texas Rangers 10-5, Detroit Tigers beat Boston Red Sox 6-3, Baltimore Orioles defeated New York Yankees 4-2, Cleveland Indians topped Milwaukee Brewers 7-3 and, in 14 innings, Kansas City Royals beat Oakland Athletics 5-4.

Bill Melton hit the 100th homer of his major league career, a two-run shot that started a five-run Chicago blitz in the fifth inning which assured them of victory over the Rangers.

Eddie Fisher, in his first season as a regular starter for Chicago after 10 seasons of relieving and spot-starting, lost his shutout in the eighth on a two-run homer by Dave Nelson.

The Red Sox out-homered the Tigers 3-2, with Carlton Fisk connecting twice and Rico Petrocelli once. Norm Cash and Al Kaline had the Tiger shots; Cash's with the bases empty to give Detroit the lead for good at the start of a three-run fourth inning and Kaline's a two-run job that widened the lead to 6-1.

Sparky Lyle, last year's ace of the Yankees' bullpen crew, had given up a game-breaking homer to Boston's Orlando Cepeda in his first relief appearance. Tuesday night, in his second, he gave up one to Baltimore's Earl Williams in the eighth inning.

Playoffs Like A New Season

Houston Aeros reaffirmed the old adage about playoffs being a new season Tuesday as they eliminated Los Angeles Sharks in the World Hockey Association quarter-final round.

The Aeros, who had only three wins and a tie in 10 regular-season games against the Sharks, scored a 3-2 victory Tuesday to win the best-of-seven series 4-2 and advance to the semi-finals against Winnipeg Jets.

Starting date for the Winnipeg series was not immediately announced.

Frank Hughes sparked the Houston victory with two first period goals at Los Angeles. After defenceman Ralph MacSweyn narrowed the margin with a second-period goal for the Sharks, Murray Hall scored what proved to be the winner late in the middle frame.

CANADA'S CUP OF TEA

Canada Cup Reserve is a new 6 year old Canadian whisky.

It is made by Canadian Schenley.

Over the last 28 years Schenley has built a reputation on quality. So Schenley puts its name on the line every time that name goes on a bottle.

To simply call Canada Cup Reserve "Canadian" isn't enough for Schenley. It must measure up to their standards of a Canadian whisky. Smoothness, lightness and a rich Canadian taste.

Under the supervision of Schenley's master distiller, over 12 different blends were developed and put through extensive taste tests. Only 6 years-aged whiskies from hand charred white oak casks were tested.

Only men skilled in the distilling art made the decisions. This wasn't a popularity contest but a careful search for supreme quality. Schenley Canadian Quality.

Finally a blend was chosen, one that could truly bear the name — Canada Cup.

Try new Canada Cup Reserve. Sip it slowly as a taster would.

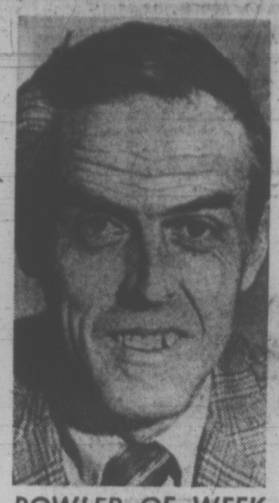
Battered Broncos Have a 'Duty'



BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong middle game helped Ross MacKinnon capture men's fivepin honors in 26th and final week of 10th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Ross rolled 302-333-287—922 series in Income Tax League at Gibson's Bowladrome to earn weekly award that qualifies him for Bowler-of-the-Year in rolloffs on April 29.

CALGARY (CP) — Humboldt Broncos of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League face suspension today after the team withdrew Tuesday from its Centennial cup quarter-final series with Portage la Prairie Terriers citing deliberate attempts to injure Humboldt players.

Joe Kryczka of Calgary, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Tuesday night he would make a decision on the suspension today and said Humboldt had a "duty to finish the series."

He said in an interview that if Broncos fail to appear in Portage tonight for the sixth game against the Manitoba Junior League champions, they have "forfeited the series."

Terry Henning, coach of the Broncos, said he sent a telegram to Frank Germann, the CAHA representative in Saskatchewan, after Monday night's brawl-filled game won by Humboldt 7-4. The win left Broncos trailing 3-2 in the best-of-seven series.

Germann, in Wilcox, Sask., said the series had not been called off officially and that he was exploring all avenues to have the schedule completed.

George Allard of Winnipeg, secretary-manager of the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association, said until a withdrawal was received "in black and white, we will consider the series on."

"I've instructed the Terriers to be on the ice at 8 p.m., prepared to play."

Henning said there were "deliberate attempts at injuring players on my club."

Monday's game was called with three seconds remaining in the third period when, on a face-off, a Portage player speared his Humboldt counterpart instead of going for the puck.

Previously 44 penalties had been handed out in the game, with five players from each team being ejected at the 18:03 mark of the third period after a fight broke out in the penalty box.

Henning said two of his players suffered severe leg injuries in the five games and four were recovering from facial lacerations.

"My players suffered more injuries in the five games than in all the previous season," Henning said, adding "it's unreal."

Kryczka said if Humboldt was complaining about the officiating, "the association is prepared to look into the matter, but it seems strange it took Humboldt five games to complain about it."

George Jay Wins

Lakers Lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry West sank a 15-foot baseline jump shot with eight seconds left, capping a rally that brought Los Angeles Lakers a 101-99 comeback victory over Golden State Warriors Tuesday night in their opening National Basketball Association playoff series.

The Warriors built their largest lead at 91-82 with 7:05 remaining but they were in foul trouble by that time.

In the drive West scored nine points and finished with 15. Erickson with six points in the final period had 17 for the night. The same total was piled up by Gail Goodrich.

Thurmond scored 22 for the Warriors and hauled down 26 rebounds, one more than Wilt Chamberlain, who tallied only four points.

The Montego Story.

"When you're this comfortable, this stylish and have such a smooth ride, you just have to be a success."

Mercury Montego 4-Door Pillared Hardtop

Mercury Montego MX 2-Door Hardtop

When sales increase the way Montego's have, there has to be more than one reason.

There is. Let's start with the ride. Trim-sized Montego's ride compares favourably with that of the bigger, more expensive luxury cars. And so it should. Because our engineers have used special butyl rubber bushings to cushion Montego's frame from the suspension, so you ride in smooth, luxurious comfort over almost any type of surface.

To the ride of a luxury car, Montego adds quiet, spacious, elegant interiors, highlighting the impression of a car that costs more than Montego does.

And this year's classic styling gives those looking for an easy-handling, economy-conscious prestige car even more reason to go Montego.

There are nine trim-sized Montego models to choose from, including two superb wagons with over 84.9 cubic feet of cargo space. Every model incorporates a full complement of Ford Motor Company Safety Design Features.

And every Montego is a car that will fit your life style — this year, next year and in the years ahead.

B.C. Soccer Commission Plans Sweeping Changes

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Wheels of change have started spinning and when they stop, and the dust settles, B.C. soccer could well have had its biggest facelift ever.

Officials of the B.C. Soccer Commission left a meeting in Vancouver Monday night with a proposal to scrap the Pacific Coast, Mainland and Inter-City Leagues and amalgamate the best teams from each in a new multi-division league.

The initial proposal calls for the formation of a streamlined league of four or may be five divisions with a promotion and relegation system, similar to that operating in England.

It is suggested that there be 10 teams in each division — but the plan doesn't call for any Victoria clubs to be among them.

Wilf Sadler of Victoria, a B.C. Soccer Commission member, disclosed Tuesday the Commission preferred — because of travelling costs and the difficulty of communications between officials on Vancouver Island and the mainland — that Vancouver "go it alone."

The Commission recommends that Victoria West-United and Victoria Gorge Maisons, the Island's two entries in the Coast League, join the present Vancouver Island Soccer League or form a new league in Victoria.

"When things are worked out, it is possible that interlocking games between the island clubs and the new Vancouver league's first division will be added and maybe even playoffs held," Sadler said.

The Commission has already met with officials of the leagues three times, Sadler said, and will meet again on April 30 to draw up plans for the new system, which will operate next winter.

NEW EXECUTIVE

The Commission plans to form a new executive, made up of two representatives of each of the present leagues and three outsiders "deeply interested in soccer," to run the league.

It will be streamlined to include the better-class teams and the rest will play in a "recreational league" which will be formed to accommodate those mainly interested in a workout.

Sadler said he felt the new arrangement could benefit Island soccer — at least financially.

"Something had to be done," he said emphatically. "The Coast League has been poorly run and this winter's interlocking schedule with the weaker Inter-City League failed to attract the fans.

"Every time a team travels to the mainland and back it costs between $150 and $200. This money could be spent improving soccer on the Island.

"Putting everything under one heading and pleasing everyone," of course, is difficult," Sadler added. "The Coast League, being the supreme league with the top teams, the top fields and top referees, has the most to lose but we don't anticipate too much trouble from them."

And it doesn't look as though there will be "too much trouble."

Coast League officials met in Vancouver Tuesday night and straight afterwards spokesman Dennis Lewis announced they found "nothing really objectionalbe" in the idea of scrapping the present leagues.

"Providing a new exeeutive is formed and the new league is run properly, with divisions being limited to 10 teams selected on a basis of written application, we have no objections," Lewis said.

Doug Day, president of both the Island the Victoria and District Leagues and the man who will head the soon-to-be-formed Vancouver Island Soccer Commission, was thrilled with the B.C. body's recommendations.

"Travelling to and from the Island to play is far too much to expect of young players," Day said in Victoria Tuesday night. "I feel this will be the making of soccer on Vancouver Island."

The proposal came as no shock or disappointment to Victoria West-United.

Club president Gil O'Malley said, in fact, the suggestion that Victoria clubs play in the Island League came from Vic West in the form of a brief to the Commission.

"Expenses are so high now and we have to travel so much, that this will make a great difference to our club," O'Malley said.

But not all Victoria soccer men were so enthusiastic.

Cliff Thorburn Opens World Meet With Win

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Cliff Thorburn of Victoria, 1972 North American champion, won his opening-round game in the world professional snooker championship by defeating Denis Taylor of Britain, 9-8.

Thorburn, the only Canadian in the event, was to meet Rex Williams of Britain in the second round, a best-of-31 series.

Wanted: A Field For Rugby Playoff

Castaways are supposed to start playoffs in defence of the Barnard Cup Saturday — but they have nowhere to play!

A Victoria Rugby Union official said Tuesday both Carnarvon Park and Windsor Park in Oak Bay have been "closed to winter sports" and the Union was forced to look elsewhere for a field to stage the first division playoff semi-final between Castaways and Oak Bay Wanderers.

The other semi-final, between first-division league champion James Bay Athletic Association and fourth-place Cowichan, will be played at Macdonald Park at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

If Castaways eventually find a field to play on, they could retain the Barnard Cup by downing Oak Bay and then winning the final. But one thing is certain — there will be a new playoff champion in the second division.

University of Victoria Saxons, who won the Times Cup last season, were never in the hunt this year, finishing last in the nine-team division.

Division champion James Bay plays fourth-place CFB Esquimalt at 1 p.m. Saturday at Macdonald Park while second-place Saanich Velox and third-place Nanaimo meet at Lambrick Park at 2:30 p.m.

Both finals are set for Saturday, April 28, at Macdonald Park.

'Swinging' Tigers Fined

SASKATOON (CP) — Fines of $25 each to Jim McCrimmon and Murray Worley of Medicine Hat Tigers were announced Monday by Ed Chynoweth, Western Canada Hockey League executive secretary.

He said the fines were the result of the two players swinging their sticks and hitting the glass around the boards of the playing surface in the Edmonton Gardens in a playoff game Friday.

BALLARD GROUP PLANS RIVAL TEAM FOR ARGOS

TORONTO (CP) — Vice-president Bill Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens says the Gardens plans to seek a second Toronto franchise in the Canadian Football League, The Globe and Mail reported today.

In a copyrighted story, the newspaper quoted Ballard as saying he has engaged former Toronto Argonauts coach Leo Cahill to handle the football venture.

"We have scouted players in American colleges," Ballard told the Globe.

"We contemplate playing in Varsity Stadium and we're prepared to pay Argonauts some indemnity for moving into the Toronto area — say between $500,000 and $1 million."

Cahill told The Globe he talked to CFL Commissioner Jake Gaudaur Tuesday and was told that no one has thought of applying for a second CFL franchise in Toronto, which would require the unanimous approval of all existing four members of the Eastern Conference.

"It is obviously too late for us to field a team this year," Ballard said. "We are aiming for 1974."

PURCHASED by New York Yankees from San Francisco Giants is veteran infielder Jim Ray Hart, 31, who has been hampered by shoulder and knee problems in recent seasons. Yankees hope Hart will give them additional right-handed hitting strength in their bid for American League baseball pennant.

Uplands Partners Bidding for Two

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Victor Aldridge, former major league baseball pitcher and world series hero for Pittsburgh Pirates in 1925, died Tuesday in hospital at the age of 79. Aldridge, a righthander, began his career with Chicago Cubs of the National League in 1917.

Liverpool Bolsters Margin Over Arsenal

LONDON (CP) — Phil Boersma, a replacement for the injured Steve Heighway, scored once in each half Tuesday to lead Liverpool to a 2-1 win over Coventry City in English League soccer action.

The win stretched Liverpool's lead in the First Division to four points over Arsenal. Liverpool, with 57 points, has three games remaining and Arsenal four but all away.

For Coventry, which lost Willie Carr with a leg injury in the first half, it was the seventh defeat in the last eight matches. Brian Alderson scored Coventry's lone goal with five minutes left in the game.

Chelsea lost inside-forward John Boyle with a leg injury shortly before the half in its 1-0 defeat away to Everton which scored on a second-minute penalty shot by Howard Denall.

BUMP COSTS WIN

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Our Native was declared the winner of the Calumet Purse at Keeneland Tuesday after being beaten by a neck by another Kentucky Derby nominee, Starkers, in a 1 1-16th-mile prep for the Derby.

Starkers, the Greentree Stable's darkhorse candidate for the May 5 derby, came from fourth place to outduel a field of five to the wire, but bumped Our Native about one-eighth of a mile from the finish line and was disqualified and placed second.

Aisco Stable's Mr. Prospector finished third, the first defeat in his four-race career.

Mr. Prospector jumped first from the gate and set the pace by as much as three lengths with Bootleggers' Pet, Our Native, Starkers and Warbucks trailing in that order until the field reached the head of the stretch.

Then Starkers and Our Native, the Flamingo Stakes winner, battled over the final three-sixteenths of a mile.

Those Little Old Ladies Are Tough Arena Guards

TORONTO (CP) — Bob Davidson, head scout of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey league, spent as much time bucking Russian bureaucracy as he did looking at hockey during the world tournament which ended Sunday in Moscow.

In fact, Davidson came home six days early after finding the hockey disappointing and the bureaucracy frustrating.

"We couldn't get into the rink for any practices because we weren't given the passes we needed," he said.

"There was no way those little old ladies they have as guards would let us in to see the Swedes practice. Boy, are they tough.

"Only two of the Swedes on our list were playing in the games so we weren't able to see the other two at all. That's why we wanted to get into the practices, to see them that way.

"Any time any Rusian hockey people come to Toronto we go out of our way t get them seats, programs, anything they want. They wouldn't do a thing for us, even to the extent they wouldn't let us in the press room to get a line up."

Davidson saw winger Inge Hammarstroem, 24, and defenceman Borge Samling, 21, of the Swedish national team but Kurt Larsson, 28, a goalkeeper, and Willie Lindstrom, 22, a forward, didn't play.

He chatted with all four and found they all have lawyers the Leafs will have to negotiate with.

"At this point, I can't guess whether we'll have all four at training camp, or two or even one," said Davidson.

The three Finnish players who attended the Leaf's camp in 1972 won't be back, the scout added.

MRS. STAYPUT BACKS THE BIRDS

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Developers may complain that a 74-year-old Guelph widow is standing in the way of progress because she refuses to sell her home and property of 28 years.

But for Irene Ariss, 74, her home is the scene of her own brand of progressive development—providing housing for birds.

Mrs. Ariss, who is the first to admit she is "strictly for the birds," has been building bird houses since the age of 10 when she borrowed her brother's pocket knife to do some wood carving.

Now an experienced carpenter, she has turned her property into a bird sanctuary, and her yard contains about 18 home-made structures for the winged waifs.

Many are constructed to house more than one bird family and each has its own design — an "Ariss original." One even has a miniature bell tower on top. She also sells some.

Mrs. Ariss' home is surrounded by commercial development, including a towering apartment building, a corner garage and an automotive centre. She says she has noted an increasing number of people who call on her to ask how much she wants for her land.

"It's funny how people will try to squeeze you out," Mrs. Ariss says, but adds that her property is not for sale.

Mrs. Ariss' own little construction business has drawn considerable attention, especially from the United States. Her mini-houses, which she sells for between $25 and $35, are always on order, and can be built to almost any specifications.

Action Likely Over 'Smear'

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Fred Weatherup says he intends to sue the Social Credit opposition and Jim Henderson, Social Credit house leader over charges implying that he received a $500,000 provincial loan.

"I have never applied for a loan to either the Alberta Opportunity Fund or the treasury branch," the Lethbridge businessman said.

"This is a whitchhunt and a smear."

Henderson charged that a director of the Alberta Housing Corporation, who was sponsoring a $100-a-plate dinner for Premier Lougheed, had received the loan to build a motel.

Weatherup said Tuesday the Social Credit House leader was obviously referring to him but, "I never received a loan from any government department."

Fred Peacock, Industry and commerce Minister, said the Social Credit charges were erroneous.

"My information is that no director of the Alberta Housing Corporation has applied for or received a loan directly or indirectly from the Alberta Opportunity Fund."

Social Credit supporters said Weatherup was involved in a group that received a $500,000 second mortgage with a 15-year term at eight per cent interest for a 96-unit motel.

Duty-Free Autos Hinted

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie hinted Tuesday that he may have made at least a tentative suggestion to U.S. officials that Canada might agree to their demands to let individuals import autos from the United States duty-free.

But the minister stressed, in replying to Commons questions about the Canada-U.S. auto pact, that he will agree to such a change only if the United States agrees to provisions that will protect existing and future jobs in the Canadian auto industry.

Removal of the 15-per-cent duty on autos brought into Canada from the U.S. will lower auto prices in Canada and give North American manufacturers a higher share of Canadian auto sales, U.S. officials have said.

Gillespie was asked by Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) about newspaper reports that he agreed in a recent meeting with U.S. Treasury Secretary George Shultz to remove the 15-per-cent duty.

Gillespie did not deny the reports:

"These were exploratory talks. It would be overstating it to say that the proposals had been made, but I can assure the honorable member that if there are any changes agreed to, as I have already indicated on past occasions, they will only be agreed to if there is a mechanism to protect existing and future Canadian jobs based on Article I of the agreement itself."

PACT EXPLICIT

Article I of the 1965 auto pact, under which manufacturers of autos and parts are allowed to ship products duty-free across the border, provides that the pact is designed to enable "the industries of both countries to participate on a fair and equitable basis in the expanding total market of both countries."

Gillespie sparked a Commons uproar at the end of February when he suggested that the government no longer is committed to maintaining the pact's safeguards for Canadian auto production.

Gillespie said then that the "so-called safeguards" were meant to be only transitional when the pact was signed. In using the term transitional, he appeared to be adopting U.S. arguments.

The U.S. argument has been that the safeguards were supposed to be transitional and that Canada has gained too much from the pact, running large surpluses in auto trade.

Some U.S. congressmen have suggested that the pact will be terminated if the safeguards are not removed.

The main safeguards provide that each auto manufacturer shall have the same ratio of Canadian production to Canadian sales as he had in 1964, and in no case shall Canadian production of autos be less than three-quarters of value of autos sold by that company in Canada.

Some U.S. sources have suggested that the safeguards could remain if measures were taken to expand North American auto sales in Canada. They say removal of the 15-per-cent duty would force Canadian dealers to lower the prices on North American autos, which are more expensive in Canada than in the U.S. and thus take over more of the market, creating more jobs in the United States as well as in Canada.

Broadbent said in February that surrender of the safeguards could mean the NDP, which holds the balance of power in the Commons, will withdraw its support from the government.

NORAD PACT EXTENDED

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson announced in the Commons Tuesday the Canadian government's decision to extend the North American Air Defence Command agreement (NORAD) in its present form for a further period of two years commencing May 12.

Progressive Conservative and Social Credit spokesmen in the house concurred with the government's decision.

The New Democratic Party said Canada should have allowed the NORAD agreement to expire and not be renewed.

"Although development of new systems are now at an advanced stage, they have not reached the point at which the governments (of Canada and the U.S.) are able to decide upon the extent to which the systems for the air defence of North America should, at this time, be changed and improved," said Richardson.

Gerard Laprise (SC-Abitibi) said reports coming from the Soviet Union indicated the Russians were building a huge new fleet of long range bombers capable of flying to North America and return.

Andrew Brewin (NDP-Toronto Greenwood) said the NDP wanted the government to let NORAD "expire and die". He said the reasons were simple: NORAD was founded in 1958 and renewed in 1968 to meet an apprehended threat of an attack on North America by manned bombers from the USSR.

But Brewin said it is the conviction of the NDP that the threat of attack by manned bombers is non-existent. He said in this missile age when super powers possess the ability to destroy the society of the other, even after an all-out attack by the other, there is no possibility of an attack by manned bombers.

PM Riding High On One-Point Rise

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was accused of forgetting his "humility" and regaining his "old arrogance" in the commons Tuesday.

Lincoln Alexander (P.C.-Hamilton West) was questioning Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras on the results of his inquiries into the operations of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Not satisfied with the replies he was receiving, the opposition member asked three questions and was seeking to ask a fourth when Alexander protested that the prime minister had interjected "that's enough."

"On a point of order Mr. Speaker," said Alexander, "The prime minister said 'that's enough'. I respectfully say to the prime minister that he does not sit in your chair. His position over there is only temporary."

"He said he was there 'for keeps' when he addressed the Liberals last meek", interjected another opposition member.

There were shouts and jeers from both sides of the house.

"You know, it's amazing how a one point percentage can bring back that same old arrogance" said Alexander, referring to the one point gain registered by the Liberals in the latest Gallup Poll.

There was heavy pounding of desks in applause by both Conservatives and Liberals.

"How about six per cent?" enquired Finance Minister John Turner, referring to the six-point drop shown in the poll for the Progressive Conservatives.

Jasper Rail Move?

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark (PC—Rocky Mountain) said he will hold a public meeting in Jasper May 12 on the issue of removing the Canadian National Railway's divisional operations from the park.

Clark said a statement by Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien last week left the clear impression that the government intends to have CN move its Jasper operation elsewhere. However, Chretien said later there has been no decision to move the CN operation from the park immediately and there is no need for hearings before July.

Saanich Staff Gets Time On Recreation Report

Saanich senior staff will need another six weeks to evaluate municipal recreation needs, including participation in a new community-use school project at Burnside and Acorn.

Municipal administrator W. M. Tremayne said the additional time was necessary to update the December, 1966, Sanderson report although a finished report had been predicted within one or two weeks when staff was given the assignment last month.

Municipal planning throughout the area is being considered by the planning staff, Tremayne said.

Meanwhile, council deferred action this week on helping School District 61 finance the Burnside-Acorn secondary school project where extra facilities such as a $350,000 swimming pool are concerned.

It was better to await the perspective that will be gained with a new survey of the municipality's total recreation needs into the future, aldermen agreed.

RENT-A-BABY PLAN PROBED

TORONTO (CP) — Police are investigating a recently-formed company offering babies for rent.

Ron Rochon said Tuesday he is still organizing Ron's Rent-A-Baby Service and isn't ready for any publicity yet.

Rochon wouldn't say where he will get the babies or what rental fees will be. The company was set up as a fund-raising device for Gallery Z, an art school.

Police learned of the new company, which has a city business permit, from the Children's Aid Society.

The society's Ted Burch became curious about the company when he discovered its name in a list of newly-formed businesses.

"The whole thing has enormous implications," he said. "In a situation like this, there's a good chance the child will be abused."

Taxi Man Simplifies Pitch

Victoria Taxi president J. C. Thwaites today came up with a simplified formula for getting his independent members into downtown competition with the two or three controlling companies.

Thwaites told the city's traffic sub-committee taxis should be allowed normal use of metered parking space for company service, meals and personal business.

They should be allowed to wait in commercial and truck zones, providing that drivers remain in their cars and make way for vehicles wanting to use free space.

Taxis should be allowed to stand in the Causeway area and soliciting should be defined as calling to or accosting people passing by, Thwaites said.

Under present conditions, taxis are not strictly allowed to be hailed or to wait anywhere other than at the stand either on or off business.

Established companies work through a network of telephone franchises, arrangements and regular customers.

Thwaites pushed earlier this year for establishment of more exclusive taxi stands in lucrative downtown locations, but he has changed his approach since looking at taxi bylaws and operating practices in other cities.

Victoria police indicated at that time they were reluctant to devote valued parking space to taxi stands.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two 19-year-old women and two 21-year-old men Monday were charged in Victoria provincial court with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Larry Douglas Hurdle, Cheryl Ann Greening, both of 4-1731 Cook, and Linda Kimberley Hasser and Allan Dunn, of Vancouver, were arrested Monday night in a raid on a Cook Street apartment by the Victoria drug squad.

All four were remanded in custody to Thursday afternoon for consideration of bail. The joint trafficking charge was remanded without plea to April 24.

Copper had been placed on 12 months' probation in Campbell River, March 28, only a week before the Victoria offence.

But First, a Young Girl Died . . .

By RAM SUNDAR
CP Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — A school girl's suicide has turned the spotlight on social tensions in India's capital and attempts by opposition parties to exploit them.

New Delhi recently witnessed five days of violent demonstrations following reports that a student was compelled by "acute mental torture" to jump into a well and drown herself.

Seventeen-year-old Prem Lata, a pretty and usually vivacious girl with dark eyes and long hair is reported to have told friends that Pushpa Wati, the school principal, was "persecuting" her since she was supposed to belong to a low caste and her parents were extremely poor.

Among other things, Prem alleged that the principal refused to accept a gift of candy from her on the birthday of God Krishna, a popular Hindu festival.

"You are of mean origin—don't come near me," Miss Wati is reported to have told the girl. When Prem broke into tears, she was alleged to have been locked up for several hours in a room without food or water.

The next day the girl's body was found floating in a well.

RIOTING FOLLOWED

This was the signal for a spell of serious rioting in parts of the Indian capital. Opposition parties including the rightwing Jana Sangh (People's League) and the Republican party staged big processions and there was street fighting between the police and demonstrators in many areas.

The opposition parties said social discrimination was responsible for the girl committing suicide and charged the government with indifference to the plight of poor people in the lower strata of Hindu society. The latter were openly urged to set fire to government property.

Within hours five government buses were burned. The public display of Prem's ashes further incited the rioting mobs.

Only the arrest of Miss Wati and the institution of a judicial inquiry brought peace to the capital.

Ironically, Judge M. K. Chawla who investigated the affair announced some days ago that there was no basis for the charge that Miss Wati had treated Prem harshly.

Not a single witness came forward to substantiate the opposition charge that the low-caste girl was the victim of social discrimination.

PRINCIPAL UPHELD

On the contrary, Judge Chawla said in his findings, each of Prem's classmates told him that Principal Wati treated all students equally well.

Miss Wati was acquitted honorably.

The judicial findings are regarded in political circles as a damaging, indictment of parties like the Jana Sangh and the Republican party which have been cynically exploiting the grievances of low-caste people.

But there is little comfort for the Indian govvernment in the findings since it only shows, as one columnist put it, that a big riot can be fomented even in the national capital on the basis of fanciful rumors.

"All this only demonstrates how out of touch our government and ruling politicians are with the feelings of the so-called low castes," said a pro-government MP.

Though Miss Wati emerged from her ordeal unscathed, the government is reported to have ordered a quiet investigation to find out if students belonging to low castes are treated decently in all the capital's schools.

"Prem Lata will not have died in vain if the whole episode helps to focus attention on the problems of the capital's poor," said one Delhi University teacher. "The only way to prevent political parties from exploiting their grievances is to improve their over-all economic condition."

RUSTLING UP ON PRAIRIES

OTTAWA (CP) — Rising meat prices have contributed to an increase in cattle rustling on the Prairies, federal agriculture officials said Tuesday.

"The price of beef is part of it," Esmond Jarvis, assistant deputy minister of production and marketing, said in an interview shortly after a grilling on the subject in the Commons agriculture committee.

F. E. Payne, director of the department's livestock division said that identifying the animals is a big problem.

Modern rustlers pull into a pasture, pick out a steer, then shoot and butcher it on the spot.

They leave the hind and ears, which have been branded and marked, toss the meat into a truck and take off.

Experiments with identification pellets that can be shot into a live cow or steer have not been succesful, Payne said.

In order to be effective "you have to bang in about 20 pellets in most of the good cuts of meat." The beef then became contaminated with pellets.

Knight said rustling has become so bad in southern Saskatchewan that a group of cattlemen "almost passed a resolution to bring back the rope" to try to curtail the practice.

"No kidding," Knight said after the meeting, "some of the stockgrowers were talking about forming vigilante groups to try to round up rustlers themselves."

Cattle themselves make rustlers' lives easier, he said after the meeting. They see a truck drive up and wander over expecting to be fed.

It only takes about 15 minutes to either load a truck or butcher a steer and drive away.

Yorchinski said police are practically helpless in the face of new rustling methods. New ways to identify cattle were needed to help them, he said.

Bird Box Contest Closes June 24

Entries to the Bluebird nest box competition, sponsored by the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society in an effort to provide homes for the urban sprawl-hit species, can be left at Francis Park nature house, Munn Road, until June 24.

Chairman of the competition Dr. J. B. Tatum has announced judging will take place June 25 and winning boxes in each of the three age categories — six to 16; 17 to 60 and over 60 — will be sent to Vancouver to compete with provincial winners.

The bluebird is the society's symbol of hope and happiness and competitors are asked to sent out the boxes in their own gardens after the judging takes place, or they can specify that their boxes go to the Crippled Children's Society camps to attract the birds.

Boxes will also be accepted at three other Island locations between June 3 and 16; Bowen Park administrative buildings, Nanaimo; Eves Park Nature House, Duncan; Miracle Beach Nature House at Black Creek Park.

Among prizes for the Vancouver Island competition to be judged by naturalist Freeman King are the books, Birds of Canada by W. E. Godfrey and the Larousse Encyclopedia of Animal Life.

Profit First, Then Subsidy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government possibly can make a modest profit at Ocean Falls, for two or three years but after that the operation will have to be subsidized, Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. president Robert Rogers said Tuesday. (See also Page 29.)

Rogers made the statements at Crown Zellerbach Canada's annual meeting and in an interview afterwards.

He told shareholders that under the right circumstances and with strong newsprint markets the Ocean Falls newsprint mill can, under government management, break even or possibly make a modest profit.

In the interview, he said the government "cannot lose" until 1975 or 1976 but after that will not be able to keep the mill going except on a subsidy basis.

"They have two years to find some other need for the community," he said.

Rogers said the only reason the plant — which Crown Zellerbach sold to the government earlier this year along with the townsite 300 miles north of here, for $1 million — will be profitable at first is the lack of equity and the present short supply of newsprint which means prices will continue to rise.

He said the pulp and paper business is cyclical, which means that it is going to have to go down again at some time.

"I see it (the fall in prices) as 1975-76," he added.

After this, he said, Ocean Falls and its 50 and 60-year-old newsprint machines will not be viable as a producing location for pulp and paper products even on the smaller investment base.

The plant and townsite were sold to the government just before the company was due to close it down completely. The government then announced it would re-activate the two old newsprint machines there to keep the community going.

Another part of the deal is that Crown Zellerbach will both supply logs to the mill and market the newsprint produced, until 1975.

Rogers said there is no relation between the government's purchase of Ocean Falls and its separate acquisition of the Columbia Cellulose mills at Prince Rupert and in the Kootenays because of the two-year life of the former Crown Zellerbach property.

He said geography prevents the Ocean Falls and Prince Rupert operations being integrated.

Crown Zellerbach, he said, had had a cash drain for the last three years as a result of the Ocean Falls operation but he declined to put a figure on the total amount.

He said the townsite alone was being supsidized at the rate of $1 million a year when it was full.

JOB SWITCH for Edward Milne Secondary School principal Donald Kerley makes him co-ordinator of the Sooke School District's band program. Kerley has taught in the Sooke district for many years and has been principal at Edward Milne for four years. In his new position he will work out of Dunsmuir and adjacent elementary schools.

PPWC Bids To Be Heard

The B.C. Labor Relations Board will hold a hearing in Victoria next week into bids by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada to take over bargaining rights from the International Woodworkers of America at four mills in the Nanaimo-Ladysmith area.

A spokesman for the Duncan IWA local said the hearing will take place Wednesday, April 25, in the Law Courts Building.

Recalls Match Sales

Times News Services

MONTREAL — For every car sold in Canada in 1972, one was recalled because of mechanical defects, according to a McGill University professor.

The recalls cover both late-model and early-model vehicles in which defects have only just come to light.

Although Ford and Datsun made only 29.6 per cent of the 1972 Canadian auto sales, the two companies accounted for 82 per cent of the 770,000 recalls, he said.

Ford alone recalled 440,566 vehicles, more than twice as many as it sold, the professor said.

Mental Patients Kept in Cages

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Pennsylvania welfare secretary Helene Wohlgemuth has fired a hospital superintendent after retarded patients were found locked in five-by-five wooden cages at Polk State school and hospital.

Mrs. Wohlgemuth said the dismissal of Dr. James McClelland, 58, was effective May 1. She took the action following an unannounced visit to the hospital last Saturday.

"In a women's day room was a cage made of wooden slats with a small door and a padlock," she said.

"The cage was about five-by-five-by-five and inside sitting on the floor was a woman.

"In the men's ward, I saw men in 'play pens.' The pens also are about five feet high, more a corral, in order that they (patients) do not roam from the building."

McClelland said the cages were built in the 1950s and have been used "as a means of separating disturbed or aggressive patients" from other patients.

"While in the pens, the patients are under observation," he said. "While a man is in the pen he doesn't have to be put into a strait jacket."

Five $2,000 scholarships for girls advancing into senior grades have been established by the governors of Strathcona Lodge School for Girls.

Governors of the Shawnigan Lake school say the scholarships will be awarded on the basis of character, scholastic achievement, athletic ability and leadership potential, as well as financial need.

Mediator Enters Duncan Dispute

DUNCAN — Mediation officer R. S. Raguin has been appointed to try to settle a dispute between Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America and Cowichan School District.

Negotiations between the two sides for a new contract covering 67 maintenance workers and school bus drivers broke down last month after union members rejected a package which included pay raises of 37 and 36 cents an hour over two years.

Civic Jobs in Saanich Attract 26

Twenty-six professional engineers have applied for two senior vacancies in the Saanich engineering department, to be filled later this month.

Personnel officer Bill Locker said many of the applicants have included on their written applications both of the positions — assistant municipal engineer and subdivision engineer, the latter a newly-created job.

The assistant engineer's post became vacant with the resignation effective last Friday of John Cowlin, who is entering private consulting work.

Eleven applicants specified interest in the assistant engineer's job only, four specified the subdivision engineer only and the rest applied for either position.

Interviews will take place over the next two weeks for the most promising candidates.

THE CITY POLICEMEN DREAD

By RAM SUNDAR
Canadian Press Correspondent

CALCUTTA (CP) — Senior police officials dread being sent to Calcutta, India's largest metropolis.

A local newspaper man said a New Delhi police official who was asked to take up an assignment in Calcutta organized a "yagna"—mass prayers by holy men—in his home to invoke God's help.

As one of his juniors put it, "The fact that my boss was ultimately forced to move to Calcutta only shows that even God cannot come to the rescue of a policeman posted here."

Police officials are unwilling to work here because of what one of them describes as "the shadow of ideological politics which hangs over everything, even the most trivial matter."

Calcutta has more than its share of politicians trying to influence the administration in this or that direction.

Several senior police officials came to grief during the Marxist-led administration which was thrown out of office last year in a dramatic general election which gave the troubled state of West Bengal a measure of internal stability.

The officials had refused to carry out some of the Marxist government's orders which they considered undemocratic. Some of them were transferred to remote rural areas or sent back to the federal government's Indian Police Service (IPS).

Though the Marxists no longer are in power, the tussle between the politicians and the police continues.

Some ministers of the Congress party ministry led by Chief Minister Sidharta Shanker Ray, a close associate of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, think that senior police officials in Calcutta and other areas of West Bengal State are becoming increasingly difficult to handle even at the cabinet level.

Making a sensational charge at a public rally, Internal Security Minister Subrato Mukherjee said: "It now is clear that the real people who run the police department are not the ministers but senior police officials. In fact, we have no powers to ask them to do things in a particular way. They just won't listen to the ministers."

Mukherjee complained that police officials were in league with "vested interests" like big landlords and businessmen. He said policemen were helping landlords to persecute poor peasants.

Mukherjee has threatened to resign if by next year he does not succeed in taming his police officials.

"We are pained by Mukherjee's charges," said one police official who recently retired after serving for 29 years. "It is the same old story of policemen and politicians unable to pull together."

Last-Ditch Bill Delay Bids Fail

Hopes for the prorogation of the legislature today may have sailed out the window as a result of attempts Tuesday night by the Socreds to debate two government bills when they came up for third reading.

The Socreds proposed six-month delays on the bills. Both were defeated by the government but the motions took up a considerable amount of time during the Tuesday night siting, which had been expected to deal with the government's only remaining major legislation — the automobile insurance plan.

Considerable time also was spent on debate of amendments to various statute laws of the province, which contain a number of minor measures in an omnibus bill. Debate on those amendments was expected to continue today.

At the end of the afternoon sitting, Premier Barrett raised hopes for a prorogation today by saying that the whips of the four parties should get together and decide whether Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen should be called to the house in the morning of the afternoon for the prorogation ceremony.

But as more time was spent on the delay motions and the statute amendments, hope faded. However, Barrett said after the evening sitting adjourned at 11:25 p.m. that it is still possible the house will rise for the last time today, depending on the co-operation the government gets from the opposition parties.

Social Credit whip Jim Chabot (SC — Columbia River) said his party wants more time to be spent on private members' bills after the government's legislation is disposed of. He said a Thursday sitting would be well suited for this purpose.

Chabot would not say how long his party plans to carry debate of the automobile insurance legislation. He also said that it is possible the Socreds will not grant their permission for third reading of bills for which amendments have not yet been printed. This possibility arises for the auto insurance bill, which is due to be slightly amended by Highways Minister Bob Strachan.

In that case, a Thursday sitting would be mandatory.

The Socreds' delaying tactics became apparent soon after the start of the night sitting when the house was due to consider a report on committee-stage amendments to the Development Corporation of B.C. Act — the vehicle by which the government proposes to encourage secondary industry in B.C.

Third reading, even after a formal vote, would normally have been given fairly swiftly, but the Scoreds departed from customary practice with an hour-long debate stemming from a motion by Pat Jordan (SC — North Okanagan) asking the government to hold over the legislation for six months.

Jordan said in view of the widespread public concern arising out of the bill, and particularly the powers which the proposed development corporation would have to invest in any industry in the province, there should be an opportunity for further study before it is given third reading.

She was supported by other Socreds including Bob McClelland (Langley) and Harvey Schroeder (Chilliwack), but received sarcastic condemnation from Conservative house leader Scott Wallace, who said the official opposition were being ingenuous if they really thought the NDP government would have changed its basic policy at the end of the six-month period.

Wallace also said the amendment was "preposterous and ludicrous" because a Socred private member's bill placed on the order paper earlier this session contained similar powers of investment in private enterprise to those provided in the government legislation.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) noted that the Social Credit party and the NDP both want to promote secondary industry in the province, but the former wants to use basic incentives to the private sector while the latter favors the principle of taking an equity position in companies.

He raised a laugh when he said the Liberals, who have always argued the importance of secondary industry, "agree to it being done either way."

McClelland said that statement indicated the Liberal party will vote for either approach "as long as they don't fall off the fence," and Schroeder said Wallace's support of the government on the legislation showed "we now have a socialist Conservative party in B.C."

Highways Minister Robert Strachan described the Socreds' tactics as "probably the most pitiful display I have seen in this house." He said the opposition was indicating that "you don't mean a word you said the whole session" in expressing support for the development of small manufacturing enterprises in the province.

The party was deliberately holding up the work of the house and preventing aid, through the legislation, from reaching small businesses, he said.

The Liberals and Conservatives joined the government in defeating the Socred amendment by 39 to 10, and the same combination of parties gave the bill third reading by that voting margin.

A debate of a similar nature took place on a Socred motion to hoist the controversial Energy Act for a six-month period. The motion was defeated 35-16, however, with the three opposition parties joining against the government.

B.C. NOW OWNS TOWN

Legislation enabling the provincial government to take over the coastal community of Ocean Falls and the pulp-making operations of Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd. was given final approval in the legislature Tuesday after only minutes of debate.

Only Ed Smith (SC — North Peace) was moved to more than a few words on the legislation. He said the Ocean Falls move will result in the taxpayers of the province "pouring money into a white elephant for years to come" and is an "albatross" hanging around B.C.'s neck.

The vote on the Ocean Falls takeover found the NDP government gaining the support of both the Liberal and Conservative parties, with the Social Credit party the only opposition voters. The vote was 40-10.

The Columbia Cellulose legislation resulted in the combined forces of the government and the Conservative party voting against the Socreds and Liberals. The vote was 35-15.

Where does a wrinkle come from?

You've seen pictures of desert lakes. Dry land with cracks all over it. The cracks are there because there's no moisture under the ground. That's the way it is with a wrinkle. When the tiny cells under your skin dry out, the cells shrink. And outside, on your skin, a wrinkle appears. Sooner or later it happens to everybody.

If you could get something to put pure, fresh moisture back into those cells, your wrinkles would fade. Even disappear. Now you can get that something at better drug and department stores. It's called 2nd Debut, a specially formulated beauty discovery that's been proven to make wrinkles fade, even disappear. Applied twice daily, 2nd Debut, with CEF 600 or CEF 1200, will actually begin to smooth out ugly wrinkles. At drug and cosmetic counters.

Multiple Sclerosis Control Studied

TORONTO (CP) — An Alberta immunologist says researchers there have produced "significant" results in their attempts to enable multiple sclerosis patients to regain body used on organ transplant patients.

But the treatment is not in any sense a cure, Dr. T. A. McPherson, acting chairman of the department of immunology at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, said at the weekend.

He told the annual meeting of the Ontario division of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada:

"We should speak of 'control' as we do with diabetes or arthritis."

He said trials showed that ALG — antilymphocyte globulin — had a significant effect on the depth of patients' remissions when used with the hormone, ACTH, which stimulates production of cortisone in the body. Remissions are periods when patients regain activity to varying degrees.

The treatment did not prevent or reduce the number of relapses, said McPherson, who is also chief of medicine at W. W. Cross Cancer Institute, Edmonton.

He showed videotapes of treated patients, some of whom were able to walk again after being bedridden, although usually with help. However, although some maintained their improvement for several months, all eventually had relapses.

McPherson said trials with ALG had been conducted on about 20 patients in Edmonton for the last three years. Half received ALG and ACTH together; the rest received only ACTH.

James Bay in 1911 'Almost in Country'

Amy Petrie

elizabeth forbes

According to Mrs. James (Amy) Petrie, Victoria presented quite a different image back in 1911 when she came here with three small sons to join her husband and to make her home.

James Bay, where the family first settled was a pleasant place of homes, gardens and green fields. Rithet Street, where they rented their first house was "almost in the country."

The Empress Hotel opened only a year or so before had no wings then, just a central block. "Downtown" was roughly bounded by Government, Pandora, Douglas and Yates Streets.

Streetcars rattled and banged their way along the main streets. "Instead of waiting for one we often walked to town . . . in those days, everyone liked to walk."

On Easter Saturday (April 21), "the same day Queen Elizabeth celebrates," Mrs. Petrie will mark her 98th birthday. And she proudly tells you 62 of those years have been lived "right here in Victoria."

Born in Kemnay, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robertson, she went to work, as a young woman, in St. Andrews, the famed Scottish golf town.

There she met James Petrie, a printer. They were married in her parents' home, then returned to St. Andrews to live. Three sons, Jim, John, and Robert were born there. A fourth, Bill, was born in Victoria.

Like so many Scotsmen of that day, James Petrie eventually emigrated to Canada and to the Okanagan Valley, where he hoped to take up fruit farming.

Again, like so many others, he discovered that land in British Columbia was expensive and beyond his reach.

So, he went back to his printing trade, first in Kelowna and then in Victoria where he worked with the pioneer Acme Press. Later he joined the mechanical staff of this newspaper as a printer and type-setter.

Once Jim settled in Victoria, Mrs. Petrie and the boys came from St. Andrews to join him.

"We were two weeks crossing the Atlantic and another week coming across Canada by train," she remembers.

Once settled in Victoria, the family joined First Presbyterian Church (now First United) then at the corner of Pandora and Blanshard Street — father in the choir, mother in the missionary society and the children in Sunday school.

She also remembers social evenings in the Victoria West home of Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Hall "for singing around the piano." The latter was organist at the church for 21 years.

She speaks too, of church picnics out at Goldstream Flats. "We went out and back on the E & N train and we walked from the tracks to the flats with our heavy picnic baskets, the children running on ahead. Everyone had fun."

Outside the church it was home that occupied Amy Petrie's time and energy.

"There was no such thing as a dishwasher, and few — if any — washing machines," she reminds you.

"I did everything myself. Cooked with a coal and wood stove, cleaned with a broom and brush, washed in wooden tubs and with a scrub board and hand wringer . . . and my wash was just as white as any today."

She reminds you that in her 98 years, she has watched the advent of radio, television and the airplane. She has seen buses take the place of streetcars, gramaphones "the old ones with horns," superseded by stereos and "all sorts of gadgets come out to make work easier."

Indeed, she has enjoyed many of those gadgets in what was the family home on Howe Street for 34 years.

Today, she is quietly happy as a resident of McKenzie Lodge for senior citizens.

Still living are two sons, Jim and Bill, and there are seven grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

There will be a party on Saturday from 3 to 4:30 p.m. at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert Petrie, 2195 Cubbon Drive, where relatives and old friends will gather to mark her birthday.

Among those friends will be Mrs. Alex McKeachie, who came to Victoria to be married in 1912, and whose first home was on Rithet Street.

The Petries were the first to visit the newlyweds. This was the start of a friendship that saw Mrs. Petrie assist at the birth of four McKeachie sons and a daughter. And the two have been close friends ever since.

Truth Still Best Bet

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old, reasonably attractive girl. I live at home and work in a large office.

How can I refuse a date without hurting the man's feelings, and at the same time keep him from asking me again? If I say I am busy, he asks me again, or worse yet he'll ask for my first free evening, then I am really stuck.

You see, I don't want to date anyone outside my own religion. I'm not that hung up on religion, but my parents are so much against it, I decided it would eliminate lots of arguments at home if I just dated men of my own faith. My parents have been wonderful to me and I don't consider it too big a sacrifice for me if it will make them happy.

So, how can I politely turn down a date without appearing rude, and at the same time discourage that fellow from asking me again? — Theresa.

DEAR THERESA: What is wrong with telling him the truth?

DEAR ABBY: I'm married only four months to a fellow I'll call Mac and I've never been so miserable in my life.

Before we were married Mac was so sweet and kind, but he's changed now. Mac has beaten me on three different occasions, and I don't mean just a slap. He's knocked me around until I looked so bad I'm ashamed to go to classes (We're both in college.)

The first time he beat me because I insisted we leave a party where he was drinking too much. He beat me again because while I was trying to study he had both the television and radio blaring away so he could listen to two games at once and I turned off the TV.

Yesterday Mac gave me the worst beating of all when I refused to give him the car keys because he always takes off and leaves me all day and half the night. (The car belongs to me. My parents gave it to me so I'd have transportation to and from school.)

What am I going to do, Abby? I'm all black and blue again and I can't go to school like this. My parents live near here but I can't go home to them because they were against my marrying Mac in the first place. When I begged Mac to go to a counsellor with me to try to save our marriage he laughed in my face. Please help me. All Messed Up at 20

DEAR ALL: Go home to your parents and admit that either you weren't ready for marriage, or you chose the wrong fellow. There is little hope of saving your marriage unless Mac co-operates, and he appears unwilling. A man who beats a woman is sick. And a woman who sticks around for repeated beatings is sicker.

DEAR ABBY: Recently when my sisters and I were faced with closing the house in which our parents had lived for many years, we came upon several boxes of old pictures and snapshots. Many were of friends our parents had known over the years, but whom we barely knew. We hated to destroy them, even though they meant nothing to us, so we hit upon the idea of sending them to the families of those involved. In this way we contributed richly to the picture collections of many families. The letters of gratitude we received more than compensated for our efforts.

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: What a beautiful idea!

According to a recent estimate, up to 80 per cent of all cancers could have been prevented!

The 12-page A Clear Look At Cancer says that the incidence of this dread malady increases as we grow older. Therefore it is of the utmost importance that we learn about cancer prevention while we are young.

The pamphlet explains that cancer is a group of diseases characterized by uncontrolled growth of body cells. Among women, breast cancer is the most prevalent, followed by cancer of the genital organs and the digestive system. In men, cancer of the genito-urinary system predominates, followed by cancer of the digestive system and the skin.

In Canada, the number of lung cancer cases has been growing at an alarming rate. The death rates have increased in direct proportion to the number of cigarettes smoked. Also, death rates from all other forms of cancer were much higher among smokers than among non-smokers. Therefore prevention advice number one is: Don't become addicted to cigarettes!

Another prevention method, available to women only, is the so-called Pap Smear Test. The booklet urges every woman over 25 to undergo this simple test every two yars.

And thirdly, exposure to certain industrial chemicals can lead to cancer of various types.

For this brochure contact your local unit of the Canadian Cancer Society. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Men's Lib 'Lagging'

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (AP) — The most important distinction between women's liberation and men's liberation is awareness, according to Wayne Johnson, director of the student development program at Temple University in Philadelphia.

"Women's lib, through its determination and hard work, has become widely recognized in North America, but on the other hand, hardly anyone has heard of men's lib," Johnson said.

"Women are quicker to recognize their entrapment and do something about it. The very fact that men are still largely unaware that they are trapped is proof of the need for men's lib."

Sfages Viewed

Johnson's students examine the various images of the North American male which have been carefully nurtured in film and literature — recognizing them as among the sources of male entrapment.

The 22 male and 12 female undergraduates in his class see a different film every Friday, and discuss it the following Monday and Wednesday.

"Like women, men tend to act out the roles they feel are expected of them," Johnson explained, "and too often they take their cues from films or literature.

"Most of the stereotyped images are well known.

"To begin with, there's the 'machismo' or 'cave-man' image of hairy virility that many men have come to accept as a personal standard. It's prominent in both the films and literature of North America.

Old Standard

"For a good many men, 'Me Tarzan — You Jane' ranks as the ultimate in communication between the sexes.

"Countless men were conditioned in the old days to believe that the true measure of a man was his ability to smash a rival with one blow of his mighty fist, or to beat him to the draw and fill him full of lead," said Johnson.

"Of course this conditioning continues to shape men's desires — if not their actual lives. Tarzan has been joined by John Wayne, Burt Lancaster and a host of growling he-men types on the screen, while our literature has become not only more violent than ever, but erotic as well."

Johnson feels there is nothing more pathetic than the frustration of a middle-aged man who is ridden by subconscious fantasies and yearnings that he is unable to reconcile himself to his existence.

"His frustrations make his life completely devoid of meaning and often drive him to emotional excess such as alcoholism," Johnson said.

"This comes about because men have not yet learned to recognize their entrapment and to cope with it.

"Through the continual barrage of advertising from all sides, men are taught never to be content with what they have but always to want more.

Material Badge

Material goods are equated with masculinity and the ability to acquire them becomes a badge of virile superiority, he said.

"The man, sensitive to the pressures, is faced with a choice: either he goes into debt and saddles himself with a burden he can barely carry, or he must reconcile himself to the humiliation of seeing his wife and children deprived of the glittering array of merchandise the hucksters are pandering.

By analyzing the nature and the sources of the pressures on the American male, we can help him to deal with his life situation constructively. We will teach men to rid themselves of the false standards which have become a part of the North American scene and to recognize the true value of themselves as human beings, completely independent of what Madison Avenue and Hollywood think they should believe."

Babysitting Agency May Close, Provincial Tax Demands Cited

By NICOLE STRICKLAND

There is some danger that the only remaining babysitting agency in Victoria will soon be closed down.

Elenor Millar, owner of the Victoria Babysitting Agency, says that the provincial government threatens to tax the agency out of existence, and that under their demands, she can no longer afford to keep the service running.

"The person who sold me the agency last June had to close it down because she had a system where she billed the customers and then paid the sitter, and sometimes could not collect her billings.

"Under my system, the sitter collects the fee directly after each job, and pays me 85 cents each time she babysits. Now the provincial government tells me that I cannot legally collect agency fees from the sitter according to the Employment Agencies Act — that I have to bill the parents. The taxation department tells me I have to pay the girls' Canada Pension, UIC, and income tax, and I just can't afford that, since it will mean twice the book work."

CASUAL WORKERS

Mrs. Millar's sitters, because they are considered casual labor, charge the customer $1 an hour, paying the agency 85 cents a job whether they sit for four hours or ten hours.

"There is another problem," says Elenor Millar. "Not all my girls remit the 85 cents per job, and I find I'm not making anything from the agency."

It would seem that the problem hinges upon whether the provincial government views Mrs. Millar's agency as a job-finding agency or an employment agency — the definition of each affecting the tax structure.

LOAN TAKEN

"The Better Business Bureau went to bat for me saying there was no reason why I couldn't be considered as a job-finding agency instead of an employment agency, and Allan MacKinnon has asked me to put my problem in black and white so he could take it to the federal minister of finance to get me some tax relief, but nothing has happened yet. As it is, I have to go out on babysitting jobs myself just to meet the bills."

The business cost $3,000 to by ("far too much," Mrs. Millar now admits), and Mrs. Millar pays $75 a month on her bank loan to reduce that debt. Postage and sometimes even long distance phone calls are an expense in checking out sitters' references.

License fees for the city, Saanich, and the provincial government cost $90 a year when added up. There is a $40 yearly charge for membership in the Better Business Bureau. Mrs. Millar pays $70 a month for her business telephone, her ad in the yellow pages, and her telephone answering service.

"If I am financially unable to help myself, then I'd like to get a government subsidy to keep the agency going. Failing this, I'd like to turn it outright over to the government and ask them to pay my salary to keep it going.

"Employing good, qualified babysitters (all must receive marks of at least 80 per cent on Mrs. Millar's competence test for entry to the job, as well as having to enrol in training sessions) is my first concern, so that parents needn't worry while they're away.

"There's a definite need for this type of service in Victoria. We get about 100 calls a month for sitters, and that doesn't include the number of calls we get from people asking for advice with a child-rearing problem.

'NO BREAKS'

"One of the things bothering me is the stranded young mother with children too young to qualify for subsidized day care centres. She might like to return to work or have the occasional day off but who cannot even afford our rate of $1 an hour. She's entitled to the break from her children, but without a government subsidized babysitting agency, it's impossible.

"I think there is a great need for drop-in centres that would complement day care for children, so that the parent could drop his child off for an hour or two of playing with other children while the parent took a break.

"I've just written to Human Resource minister Norman Levi about having to close down the agency if I can't get some tax relief, and I certainly hope he can do something, not just for me, but for all those young mothers and the women we employ who depend on us."

No Hammer Blows Seen for School

South Park School is expected to be preserved as "an outstanding example of early Victorian architecture."

Greater Victoria school board heard a letter Monday night from then-city manager Bill Hooson informing the board the Victoria Downtown Business Association has suggested the building be preserved.

Before the city's land-use planning committee pursued the matter, Hooson wrote, they wished to know what the board intended to do with the school.

The board agreed to advise the committee "that the board plans to utilize South Park for education purposes for the foreseeable future, and would not object in principle to action which would preserve it as an example of early Victorian architecture."

"But final approval," the board motion read, "would be subject to clarification of the intent of the proposal."

South Park is one of two elementary schools in James Bay and the school board plans to consolidate all students in an enlarged James Bay Elementary School.

South Park School was built in 1896.

Dieting Linked to Mental Ills

By MARSHA DUBROW

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Dieting may produce serious psychological troubles, says one of the world's leading authorities on eating problems.

In a new book published here, psychoanalyst Hilde Bruch says: "Many women make a fetish of being thin and follow reducing diets without awareness of or regard for the fact that they can do so only at the price of continuous strain and tension and some degree of ill health."

Bruch, who has treated people with eating problems for some 40 years, adds:

"Never having permitted themselves to eat adequately, they are unaware of how much of their tension, bad disposition, irritability, and inability to pursue an educational or professional goal are the direct result of chronic undernutrition."

The cost in nerves and efficiency is impossible to assess, the German-born author says in her book, Eating Disorders.

"It produces serious psychological tensions for a woman to feel compelled to be thinner than her natural makeup and style of living demand," writes Bruch, a faculty member of the Baylor University college of medicine at Houston, Tex.

She says that when some elegantly-shaped women seek medical help for such problems as chronic depression, listlessness or fatigue, they are often given prescriptions for tranquillizers, when "three square meals a day would be a more logical treatment."

The psychoanalyst notes that much is said about the weakness and self-indulgence of overweight people. But she writes of the "selfishness and self-indulgence in a life which makes one's appearance the centre of all values."

She adds that some women may control their weight but remain displeased with their lives.

"Just as food never satisfied them, never gave them what they really wanted, so they are dissatisfied with their new slim figure and disappointed in what it has achieved for them."

COOKING PROPERLY 'BEATS FOOD COSTS'

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto gourmet says the secret behind beating high food costs lies in knowing how to prepare the food.

To prove her point, Mrs. Sawyer said the academy's food bill for all classes never exceeds $60 or $70 a week. This figure represents a gourmet meal for 42 people each day for seven days.

Mrs. Sawyer admitted that a lot of food used to prepare meals in her classes goes to waste "simply because the time factor does not allow us to be very economical."

Mid- and central European peasant dishes can be adapted to make delicious and inexpensive meals, said Mrs. Sawyer.

"Canadians can eat well, without too much strain on their budgets and in spite of rising prices. But in order to manage it, one thing is absolutely certain — they are going to have to learn how to cook."

Outside a Cup Coffee Shows Hidden Talents

By HILDA BEASTALL

Coffee adds to the enjoyment of food not only as the beverage to conclude a good meal but as a subtle ingredient of many gastronomic delights.

Use a tablespoon of liquid coffee as tenderizer for any dark meat, that is the coarser grained cuts of beef (we can no longer refer to these as "cheap") and for pork liver. Just pour it over the meat at halfway cooking time.

To make a richly flavored gravy for beef or pork, without flour or spices, use a tablespoon of liquid coffee with an equal amount of molasses. Vegetable cooking water, if you have any with your method of cooking, will thin out the color if desired. You will be surprised how these two ingredients combine to bring out meat flavors.

STANDARD ITEM

A cup of coffee long ago reached the height of hospitality in North American cities. It remains this way for many of us. Certainly its use in moderation is tolerated well by most, though its tolerance may depend to a great extent on its freshness. A good cup of coffee does not necessarily result from using high priced beans. In my experience, it depends more on how the ground beans are stored and how the brew is prepared.

Here I should admit that instant coffee is a convenience product, but I use it only as an emergency measure. It becomes too expensive for one thing, and it lacks the smooth fine flavor.

STORING COUNTS

So-called cheap coffees, priced as unground beans between 83 cents and just over a dollar a pound will surpass in flavor and aroma many of the higher priced grinds. Coffee at any price is poor if the product is not carefully stored after purchase. Before purchase we can only rely on apparent turnover of stock at the store where we buy.

When buying, note the dates on the bag flap. When you find two dates on two tags, 27-2 and 7-3 for instance, take the 7-3, for it will be a fresher roast than the other, having until March 7 before it "expires," or comes to the end of its "shelf life."

Grind the beans to your own requirements, either at the store or at home. But have the machine cold before doing the job.

Heat and air are the two enemies of fresh coffee flavor and aroma, so tap down the bag of ground coffee to exclude all the air possible, then fold the top down tightly before fastening.

At home, put the coffee bag directly into a plastic bag, again excluding the air, and store in the refrigerator. If you are not going to use any for several days, keep it in the freezing compartment. Do this anyway if a pound lasts you longer than a week.

Quantities to use are surprisingly small to make coffee which wins appreciation. Two rounded measuring tablespoons to a five cup percolator of boiling water makes clear golden zesty coffee if percolated gently for just about seven minutes.

KEEP CONSTANT

After the coffee basket is inserted, percolation should just be visibly constant, but not a full rolling action for this boils the coffee. Nor should the water be merely hot or the steam turns the coffee bitter and horrible.

Pour coffee while it is fresh. Don't keep it boiling. Small amounts leftover go into a covered glass jar to use in mixing gingerbread, molasses cookies; flavoring sauce or an icing glaze on coffee cake.

Coffee without milk or cream at a meat meal acts in much the same way as in a marinade, as a tenderizer or digestive.

And anyway, I like good coffee.

'I'M THE TOUGHEST'

NEW YORK (AP) — He doesn't look all that awesome, this stocky little man in a dark suit and open-throated shirt, but it wouldn't be wise to make Jack Walsh mad.

He can crush you as he would a match stick. He advertises himself as the "Strongest Man in the World."

What about Vassili Alexsev, the 350-pound Russian weightlifter who hoists 520 pounds of iron over his head with both hands?

"I lift 700 pounds with one finger," counters Walsh. "I've seen the Russian work. I admire what he does. But I'd like to challenge him in a test of real strength."

Walsh doesn't fool with iron bars. He has lifted a 4,000-pound elephant, carried a grown horse up a ladder on his back and raised with his back and arms a platform of 20 Hollywood beauties weighing a total of 5,013 pounds.

Walsh will demonstrate his feats of strength April 29 at Madison Square Garden. At that time he will attempt to break his own world record by lifting a 700-pound motorcycle with one finger.

"My strength lies in my legs," says Walsh, whose 5-foot-10, 200-pound frame masks his reputation as a modern Samson.

"Weightlifters, like the Russian, depend on biceps and triceps. The Russian's got a body like an army tank. My strength lies in my ligaments and tendons and in employment of proper leverage."

Walsh, now 43, was a skinny runt as a youngster growing up in Trenton, N.J. Just as in the pulp magazine ads, he decided to grow some muscles and get even with all those tough kids who kept beating him up. He took up weightlifting and karate.

"It all started from there," says Walsh, a second-degree black belt in karate.

In 1950, he won the title "Strongest Man in the World" and repeated in 1960, lifting a total of 5,103 pounds in iron weights.

He let the late Sonny Liston pound him in the stomach as hard as the old heavyweight champ could. A 320-pound man jumped six feet onto his stomach. He once kept a DC3 airliner from taking off by holding it with a cable. He holds back two moving automobiles under full throttle with his arms. He let himself be run over by a 10-ton truck.

"The automobile stunt is the most dangerous," he said. "Everytime I do it, I wind up in a hospital with my arms wrenched out of socket."

Prices in Vancouver Take Biggest Jump

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices climbed during March in 10 major Canadian cities, but dipped slightly in Thunder Bay, Ont., and stayed the same in Winnipeg, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Greatest monthly increase was in Vancouver, where prices rose seven-tenths of one per cent between March and February. But St. John's, Nfld., led the rest on a yearly basis. Prices there rose 6.8 per cent between last March and March of 1972.

In Thunder Bay, prices dropped one-tenth of 1 per cent, but remained 4.5 per cent above those a year ago.

March prices in Winnipeg were unchanged from those in February, but were still 5 per cent higher than those in March, 1972.

Statistics Canada said food prices rose in all cities but Thunder Bay and Winnipeg, reflecting higher prices for meat, fish, poultry, fresh produce and bakery goods. Prices for eggs, tomatoes, carrots, bananas and margarine, however, dropped somewhat.

Prices in Vancouver rose seven-tenths of a per cent between February and March to a level 5 per cent above those a year earlier. Food prices jumped, as did costs for clothing, car maintenance and repairs, bicycles, toys, phonograph records and television repairs. Housing costs also rose in response to increases in bedroom suite prices and appliances.

Cavities Linked to Breakfast Cereals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special Senate committee has made public a 1967 Food and Drug Administration report showing that a "very high" rate of cavities occurs among children who eat pre-sweetened cereals.

The select committee on nutrition also released a separate study showing that rats fed on quantities of the powdered orange-flavored drink Tang had a "significant" increase in cavities over rats fed only distilled water.

The FDA report was made by Dr. Charles C. Kilkes, an FDA dental officer who reviewed a series of tests conducted by the General Foods Corp. on the effects of phosphates in pre-sweetened cereals to cut down on cavities.

The tests were undertaken at Indiana University among children aged six to 15 to determine whether the nutrient monosodium phosphate would counter cavity-causing sugars in pre-smectened cereals.

Gilkes evaluation of the results of the tests found the cavity rate for those eating the pre-sweetened cereals with phosphates was "very high."

"Is it possible," he asked, "that the use of the . . . monosodium phosphate in the sweetened cereals merely cancels the damaging effects of pre-sweetened cereals?"

However, both Gilkes and Dr. Lloyd B. Tepper, an associate commissioner for science for the FDA, testified before the committee that the tests were considered to be "inconclusive."

Though Tepper said he would not "prescribe" the sweetened cereals for his own children, he maintained there was no conclusive evidence "that eating pre-sweetened cereals will cause more cavities than unsweetened."

The study, conducted by two researchers at the Oral Health Research Institute in Indianapolis, found that use of Tang by rats led to up to 43.2 per cent more cavities than in rats drinking only distilled water.

Schlossberg said the study found that Tang was "significantly more cariogenic (cavity-causing) than unsweetened orange juice . . ."

The study, to be published by the journal of dental research of the American Dental Association, said that the addition of phosphates to the Tang "resulted in a significant decrease in the cariogenic properties of the beverage."

VANCOUVER — All that Ugandan refugee Sikundar Umedaly has to do to get his $10,000 Mercedes-Benz limousine checked for driving in Canada is to crash the car into a brick wall at 30 miles an hour.

This is the dilemma facing Umedaly, an electronics development engineer, who is sadly watching his shiny, barely-used 1972 Mercedes sinking into a morass of Canadian safety regulations and red tape.

Getting the car out of Uganda and into Canada in the first place cost him $3,000 in freight charges. It went 750 miles up the African coast, to St. John's, Nfld., by freighter and finally by rail to Vancouver.

The problem is that Umedaly's Mercedes was specially built in Europe to cope with tropical road conditions. It lacks 33 safety items required in North America, some of which have to be built in during production and cannot be added later.

The Canadian safety regulations were laid down by Parliament in legislation approved two years ago. One of these says the "impact displacement" of a steering wheel in a car must meet Canadian standards.

The test is that the steering column must move only a limited distance when the vehicle is involved in a crash at 30 miles an hour. Umedaly says the only way he could test his Mercedes is "to drive the car into a brick wall at 30 miles an hour."

MONTREAL — Montreal lawyer Raymond Daoust said Tuesday he had never advised Theodore Aboud, a witness at the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime, to flee to Brazil after a 1970 fraud.

Aboud said Monday before the three-man inquiry he had had a telephone conversation with a man who advised him to go to Brazil.

PEORIA, Ill. — Mrs. Donna White thought her ex-husband held some sort of spell over her four-year-old daughter, Renee Hall, so she stabbed the girl to death to break it, a Peoria police detective told a coroner's jury Tuesday. Mrs. White, 35, has been charged with murder. She is in hospital recovering from slash wounds to both wrists.

CHICAGO — Joseph Condon, 32, left the courtroom a free man Tuesday after Judge John Reynolds dismissed disorderly conduct charges against him, but was arrested minutes later and charged with stealing the judge's car. Condon took Reynolds' Cadillac shortly after leaving the courtroom, and was arrested minutes later at a service station about four blocks away.

TORONTO — William Coutts, Canada's leading manufacturer of greeting cards, has left about 35 per cent of his $2 million estate to 19 charitable and religious organizations, it was learned Tuesday. Coutts, who died here last month at the age of 90, left the balance of his estate to 38 nieces, nephews and friends.

OAKLAND — Mayor John Reading won the most votes when he sought re-election in Tuesday's municipal election but not enough to prevent a run-off against Back Panther party chairman Bobby Seale. Final but unofficial tabulations of Oakland's 436 precincts showed the retired Republican businessman failed by just 84 votes to win a majority of the ballots in the eight-man race with a 34,000 ballot lead over Seale. Because he didn't get 51 per cent of the votes, a run-off between the two leading candidates will be held May 15.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon introduced entertainer Frank Sinatra at the White House Tuesday night as a man from humble beginnings who "became what the Washington Monument is to Washington—he's the top."

The applause was loud for the 57-year-old Sinatra, who has officially retired from the entertainment world. He didn't linger at the party. Nixon chatted with Sinatra in private for a few minutes and then Sinatra left.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Despite the fact his paralysis has not improved, Gov. George Wallace is able to propel himself forward on crutches, according to his staff. Wallace has been paralysed from the waist down since an assassination attempt last May 15 in Laurel, Md.

LONDON — Many ordained clergymen in the Church of England are homosexuals, the Archibishop of York,) Dr. Donald Coggan, said Tuesday night. "They put up a tremendous fight against being practising homosexuals," he said on a BBC radio program. "When they give in to that, we must treat them with great sympathy and understanding — remembering, of course, that they are in a position of very great responsibility, having under their care a lot of youngsters."

Drop 'Fair' From Bill Name: Grit

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The three opposition parties in the legislature continued their attack Tuesday on legislation which would ensure that only companies which have collective agreements with their employees could be awarded public works contracts by the provincial government.

Resumed debate on the Public Works Fair Employment Act was considerably less emotional than it had been the previous night, but several opposition MLAs and notably the Liberals again spoke out strongly against the legislation on grounds that it discriminates against non-union companies and workers who choose not to belong to trade unions.

Committee-stage approval came after nearly 90 minutes of debate, and three unsuccessful attempts by the Liberals to amend sections of the bill and the title itself.

Anderson said the inclusion of the word in the title was a misdescription of the legislation, which could not possibly be described as "fair," restricting as it does the right to work for the government to a "special category of taxpayers."

However, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald rebuked Anderson for engaging in "political gimmickry" and said a bill which seeks to protect the rights of workers deserved better than such frivolous tactics.

The Conservatives and the official Social Credit opposition supported the Liberal amendment, despite some slight hesitation on the part of the latter when the moment came to stand up for the formal count.

That alignment also supported a previous Liberal amendment which sought to delete a section of the bill giving the minister of labor wide powers to investigate the books and records of any company doing business with the government. Defeat also came by the same margin, 34 to 17.

But earlier still, the Socreds somewhat surprisingly joined the government in voting down by a 43-6 margin a Liberal amendment which would restrict bidders to those companies whose workers get wages and working conditions as good as, or better than, those provided by the government to its civil servants in similar jobs.

The amendment, which the Tories supported, was later termed "frivolous and unworkable" by James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) when explaining his party's move to reporters.

At an early stage in the debate, Labor Minister William King answered one of the questions raised the previous evening, by giving an assurance that the legislation's restriction of contract awarding to unionized companies does not apply to small family operations in the construction field.

He noted that the Labor Relations Act expressly exempts such firms from the classifications of employers' units that could become "an appropriate unit for bargaining," and therefore the exemption also applies to the Public Works Fair Employment Act.

King also said school boards, municipalities and hospital boards will not be required to comply with the union-companies-only requirement.

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace) took up a theme played by the Socreds the previous night, when he said the bill gives the labor minister "a big cudgel to force people to join unions."

"This is special-interest legislation for the NDP government — nothing more, nothing less," he said. "They have a very special interest in seeing workers unionized so that part of their dues can go to support the political campaigns of the NDP."

He charged that King is working "in coercion and collusion" with the union bosses of the province to achieve that aim.

King replied that that kind of "inflammatory" speech did nothing toward developing an atmosphere of industrial harmony in B.C. He pointed out one of the advantages of the legislation will be that it will end the practice of "secondary picketing" on construction sites, so that there will be no delays caused by employees of a subcontracting firm who are attempting to organize.

Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano), who moved the Liberal amendment attempting to delete the proposed powers of search and investigation of a company's records and documents, said the particular section of the bill gives a "fantastic amount of power" to the minister which could be abused.

He said the minister is given authority to probe the profit and loss status of a firm, its production and operating costs, and he saw no reason why there should be a need for such information.

The investigation provisions should relate strictly to the pertinent matters of the employees' wages and conditions of work, he said, terming the legislation "an unnecessary, arrogant, dictatorial invasion of privacy."

In reply, King said the section merely gives the labor minister power to investigate documents and records that are considered necessary to investigate such matters as claims for non-payment of wages. The provision also relates to the requirement under other labor statutes for the minister to ensure fair labor practices are observed, he said.

King said similar powers had existed for many years under the legislation which the bill will repeal, and he had heard no complaints of them being abused.

Rustling Drive

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government will introduce legislation later this session to crack down on cattle rustling in the province, Attorney-General A. J. Mackling announced.

Mackling declined to give any details of the proposed legislation, but said he believes cattle rustlers in Manitoba are operating in a "very organized" manner, using large trucks to transport the stolen cattle.

Early-Warning Test For Heart Trouble

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A new test for early detection of people who have high risk of a heart attack, by measuring fat levels in the blood, was reported Tuesday by scientists from Louisiana State University.

"This method is more practical and economical than the ones used at present," said Dr. Alfredo Lopez-S. of the LSU medical school.

"An ideal method for primary screening," Dr. Lopez-S. said, "should be one that doesn't require fasting, detects both cholesterol and triglyceride abnormalities, is fast, accurate, reproducable and inexpensive."

Such a test has been developed at LSU, Dr. Lopez-S. told the 57th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

"Atherosclerotic heart disease is the major cause of death in the United States and it has been proposed that the best way to combat this disease is with the early detection of those individuals with higher predisposition of suffering from it," the researcher said.

The Prison With Its Very Own Golf Course

Sauna baths and swimming are other recreational facilities at Tillberga, a pleasant group of white-walled villas 75 miles west of Stockholm which constitute the country's most experimental open prison.

In another establishment at Gruvberget, in northern Sweden, prisoners can ski and fish while attending special study courses—with their wives if they like—prior to release.

The policy would raise eyebrows in most countries. But then Sweden's conception of crime and punishment does not always run along traditional lines.

Drunken drivers account for most of the jail sentences, more than 36 per cent in 1971. Only 21 per cent were for larceny and 14 per cent for violence.

Prison sentences are relatively rare. About 10,000 people are sent to jail each year. Two-thirds of these spend three months or less at open prisons and fewer than three per cent get sentences longer than a year.

As the latest handbook on the correctional system put it: "Sweden has a permissive penal philosophy which stresses the value of humane sanctions and the need to fit them to individual offenders."

The general aim is to use prisons as an experiment in education and democracy.

Recent studies showed that only about one-third of adults in jail and 12 per cent of juveniles had had any form of professional training.

The aim therefore, is to use the prisoner's time to train him to hold a job. Prisons are kept small, most of them with fewer than 60 occupants.

At Tillberga, prisoners receive the same wage as on the labor market outside, about $2.50 an hour. Meal costs are deducted and prisoners are allowed a quarter of what is left for pocket money before the rest is compulsorily set aside for saving and expenses prisoners or their families may have outside.

Prisoners are allowed to organize their own work groups and choose their own leaders.

Carl Ericsson, head of the national correctional administration, said: "This form of industrial democracy has proved successful. Work interest has increased, absenteeism has gone down and production has nearly tripled."

Ericsson said prisoners throughout the country can join the Tillberga experimental prison if they want. If it is successful in easing prisoners' adjustment to society afterwards, it will be extended to other jails.

More Hotel Sale Facts Filed

Correspondence showing that a real estate firm listed the Glenshiel Hotel for sale at $470,000 only for the last six months of 1969 was filed in the legislature Tuesday night by Public Works Minister William Hartley.

The copy of the letter from the National Trust Company appeared to confirm a statement made by Hartley to the house last Thursday when he said the hotel hadn't been offered for sale for that price since 1969 — despite Social Credit allegations that the hotel was still available for $470,000 last summer.

INQUIRY ASKED

Tuesday's move by the minister was the latest development in a prolonged series of charges and counter-charges surrounding the price paid for the hotel, which began April 3 with an allegation by James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) that Hartley squandered $110,000 of public money in acquiring the Douglas Street hotel last December.

Chabot based that charge on a brochure which he claimed had been circulated by the National Trust Co. last summer, and on information from Land Registry records showing the declared value of the property as $580,000.

At that time Chabot called for a public inquiry of the circumstances of the purchase, and particularly of the apparent $110,000 discrepancy between the price paid and the offering price as indicated on the National Trust brochure.

MISLEADING

The matter boiled up again last week, with Hartley claiming the brochure in question was more than three years old, and accusing Chabot of deliberately misleading the house — a statement he was later made to withdraw by Speaker Gordon Dowding.

Chabot, who said he was considering taking legal action over the statement, insisted he had proof that the hotel was listed for $470,000 not only in 1969, but through 1970 and 1971. In addition, he said, it was offered to a prospective purchaser at that price in the summer of 1972.

Newell Morrison (SC—Victoria), joining in that debate unexpectedly, said a National Trust salesman offered him the property last year at that price. To date, however, the Socreds have not filed any documents in the house to back up their statements, Chabot indicating that these are with his lawyer.

EXCLUSIVE LISTING

The National Trust letter filed by Hartley, signed by the Victoria office manager T. B. Walsh and dated April 17 this year, states the company had an "exclusive listing" of the property from June 27 to Dec. 31, 1969, was unable to negotiate a sale and did not take out any further listing.

The company did not offer the property for sale beyond the end of that year, as it had "no authority to do so from the owner," the letter states.

Hartley also filed statements by two outside appraisal firms, provided in December last year, which valued the hotel at $575,000 and $640,000 respectively. To date he has refused to divulge the actual price paid by the government, although he has said the sum was less than the appraisal price.

OFY Keeps Autonomy

OTTAWA (CP) — An attempt to have the $40 million Opportunities for Youth program put under parliamentary control was rebuffed Tuesday by the Commons committee on assistance to the arts.

A motion by Joe Clark (PC—Rocky Mountain) called upon the committee to recommend to the Commons that a statute be passed at the earliest opportunity.

But MPs turned down the proposal as committee chairman Ralph Stewart (L—Cochrane) broke an 8-8 tie vote. Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) voted with the Liberals on the question.

There are eight Liberals, eight Conservatives, two New Democrats and one Social Credit MP on the committee.

Clark argued that it was difficult to get information on OFY projects under the present system, which has the program directly responsible to the office of the secretary of state.

The motion was not a criticism of the OFY program, Clark said. Rather, it removed the possibility of OFY being destroyed by the whims of a minister.

Clark said the Company of Young Canadians had been "emasculated" by a Commons committee upon the direction of a minister.

Pollen Makes His Point in James Bay

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria has shot into the national limelight because of his unusual views on highrise buildings. Planned revisions of land zoning in James Bay are a good example of his theories applied.

A study drawn up by the planning department under the mayor's guidance recommends stopping apartment buildings in three areas to preserve the houses, cutting back on some highrise areas, and creating a new zoning for townhouse style family housing the Ogden Point area.

While it does not advocate purchase of any land by the city or the provincial government for land bank or rehabilitation purposes, the study attempts to go against market trends in the interests of community planning.

The study is due to be adopted in the form of bylaws as soon as the legal department can sort out the complexities of all the individual titles involved in the sweeping rezonings.

But as the city solicitor pointed out before council last week, a passage in the James Bay study suggests that preservation of the single house areas is an intermim 10 to 20-year measure, and this kind of "temporary" lawmaking is not strictly allowed.

It also indicates some of the ambiguities of Pollen's ideas.

While the James Bay study interferes with the undoubted trend in James Bay towards a carpet of three or four-storey frame apartment buildings, and reverses apartment zonings that have existed since 1945, it has been criticized by the James Bay Community Association as over-concerned with property matters.

The association executive issued a statement last month which roasted the James Bay study for not concerning itself with such matters as community centres, imaginative answers to the motor car problem, public land and housing ownership and a truly integrated housing mix.

While it curbs the extremes of developers who would pile the biggest towers on to the smallest plots and create a Vancouver West End, it is argued, the study does not create a viable alternative.

Zoning can always be rezoned, as the study admits when it says its housing preservation areas could themselves disappear in 10 years.

It is pointed out that even if pockets of single houses are retained in a sea of frame apartments and highrises, the prices of the single houses will inevitably be subject to inflated values in spite of their zoning.

The most effective method of hedging such price inflation appears to be city or provincial ownership of the land, as is increasingly recognized in booming cities across Canada by councils which buy up tracts as an extra control in addition to zoning.

It has also been observed that Pollen's 1972 freeze on the apartment boom in James Bay came none too soon.

In 10 years between 1961 and 1971, nearly 2,000 apartment units were built in James Bay, and one-sixth of the single houses were torn down.

Even with the freeze, between 1971 and the end of 1972 (Pollen was elected in December 1971), nearly 1,200 more apartment units were authorized to be built. The acceleration came in the wake of a 1968 James Bay plan which took the brakes off the whole area and included a 29-storey shopping centre at Menzies and Simcoe.

Yet critics fear that Pollen's effort to put the brakes on again could easily be wiped out by the election of a stronger developers' lobby to city council since it relies on zoning alone.

Here lies the most curious ambiguity of Pollen's attempts to control development. While the mayor's views draw attention across the country for being far-out and radical, his applied measures at home draw criticism for being too moderate and short-sighted.

VOICE FROM HEAVEN

DENVER (UPI) — Bill Forington says voices told him in 1953 to get busy building helicopters but the voices didn't tell him how. Forington has spent 20 years trying to build one that won't crash.

"One of the first ones I built went out of control, lifted me and a friend in the air, did a barrel roll and went over backwards," he said.

So far, Forington has built eight helicopters in the basement of his home in suburban Denver.

His latest crash was last February when he got his single-seated chopper three feet in the air before it came down and broke his arm.

"It was a sheer panic thing," said Forington, 41.

"I let go on the controls and threw my arm out when I saw the ground coming up at me. I'm accepting it. I knew it was dangerous when I went up."

Forington builds his helicopters of fabric and lightweight steel tubing in sections in his basement workshop. He assembles them outside before takeoff.

Two years ago, Forington built a helicopter that didn't crash but it only got six inches off the ground for two seconds.

The Federal Aviation Administration got upset and threatened fine him $2,000 for flying an unlicensed aircraft.

Forington became a helicopter fan in 1953 when he strolled outside the house. That's when he heard the voices.

"It was like God gave me a command — it was just that crazy," he said.

"I didn't have any interest in helicopters then but for some strange reason, I got kind of a mad impulse to build one."

Forington has tried without luck to get the federal government interested. He says the FAA has told him his newest helicopter must be licensed as a research and development vehicle.

"You call somebody up and tell him you've got a helicopter and you hear the phone go dead on you," Forington said.

VISITOR from Oregon Shirley Eller admires paintings by members of Victoria Sketch Club on display in the second-floor west lounge at the Provincial Museum. The club's 64th annual exhibition opened Saturday and continues until April 27.

FAST-FOOTED LOVER

By ALLAN REDITT

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuter) — Malay medicine men, or Bomohs, have been in the news again following the exploits of a 69-year-old Don Juan by the name of Mohamed Lazim Bin Hod.

Lazim peddled pills and love potions, exorcised ghosts and placed spells in the area of Temerloh in central Malaysia where his powers were much respected. Finally his powers indirectly killed him.

The cause of his downfall was making love to a rice farmer's wife on three occasions, not only in her connubial bed but while her husband was sleeping next to her.

The old man seems to have been fleet of foot because he was able to escape before the husband could catch him.

The wife explained in all innocence that she was unable to refuse the bomoh's advances because of his supernatural powers.

This explanation was perfectly understood by most Malaysians. Even the most Western-educated here are loath to scoff at the powers of the bomohs.

The husband was not put off, however, by tales of the bomoh's supernatural powers. He eventually met the bomoh and felled him with an axe handle. The bomoh died.

The husband was jailed for five years after being found guilty of culpable homicide.

Malaysian news columnist S. H. Tan said it was a pity the bomoh had to go this way.

"Think of the fame and fortune he could have earned in the capital dispensing not only love potions but also the secret of longevity," Tan said.

"When it comes to affairs of the heart, give me a bomoh anytime. They know what it is all about."

The bomoh, regarded as a magical healer but often, in fact, an expert herbalist, is trusted not only in the remote villages but in the towns as well.

They have hit the headlines for raping 15-year-olds as a means of removing lethal foreign bodies from their organs, raping wives in order to cure their husbands of some malady and even making love to students to ensure they pass examinations.

A few years ago a Malaysian minister told parliament that sex education should be introduced into the school curriculum to prevent bomohs from molesting girls.

But a respected member of parliament once offered a motion calling for the appointment of an official bomoh to give guidance in national policy decisions.

It had been raining for days before the Queen visited the state of Sabah, but not a drop fell durng her visit. When she left, the rain returned.

Opening at Last

Under construction since 1959, the Opera House in Sydney, Australia, will be completed in June and opened by the Queen Oct. 20.

More Ugandans to New Zealand

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (AP) — New Zealand has agreed to a United Nations request to take more Ugandan Asians from among the 1,200 still in camps in Europe. Prime Minister Norman Kirk said his country will take an additional 50 families.

The Odessa Connection Can Get You Anything

By FRANK CREPEAU

MOSCOW (AP) — Russians probably exaggerate when they say, "You can buy anything in Odessa—even Mount Everest."

But they aren't stretching the point much. Odessa has the most famous black market in the Soviet Union.

The shortage of consumer goods spawns theft of state property, under-the-counter deals and networks of "connections" that supply black markets across the country.

So it is possible in the Black Sea port and other cities to buy foreign chewing gum at the equivalent of 67 cents a stick, blue jeans and Russian-made coats that never seem to be on sale in state stores. You can even see a bearded man trying to sell a second-hand wedding gown.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, the newspaper of the Young Communist League, investigated Soviet black markets and said in an article they are corrupting Soviet youth.

NAME IT, THEY SELL IT

The newspaper's special correspondent, Y. Schkekochinhin, started in Odessa. He was disturbed by what he found there.

People were selling a cotton robe minus one sleeve, a jacket covered with oil, chunks of canvas, an overcoat, rubber dolls, homemade hammers, blue jeans, a woman's wig, a striped sailor's shirt, shabby rubber boots, suits, shoe laces, glasses, patent-leather shoes, a bicycle pump.

One young boy "stuck a velvet shoe under my nose," the correspondent wrote.

Prices were 100 rubles for a pair of jeans, 100 rubles for leather shoes, 10-15 rubles for a necktie, 150 rubles for a nylon jacket and 50 kopeks for a stick of chewing gum. The ruble is officially valued at $1.34.

The correspondent was particularly upset that children hanging on to their mothers' shopping bags were taking it all in, and teen-agers were selling things.

An Odessa policeman told the author any child "knows that if he sells a piece of gum he gains his first ruble."

SUPPLY UNCHECKED

The writer went to the police and found that the battle against specialists in foreign-made goods had been going on for a long time, but people still get their hands on them.

The chief of the Odessa ministry "for the struggle against theft of Socialist property" told the correspondent of several arrests. One man brought 12 women's coats with mink collars that have a state price of 260 rubles and sold them for 500 each. Another had 30 rabbit-fur hats priced at 11 rubles that he sold for 30.

The police said they lack the manpower to stop such dealings and that traders come to Odessa from Rostov, Leningrad, Saratov, Moscow and Riga.

The correspondent said it would be difficult to prove to young black market dealers that to close the market would be "better, nobler, cleaner." The boys would only tell him to go to a state store "and just try to obtain something."

He was told by the Odessa trade department that it could not compete with the black market in clothing, shoes or hats.

"We cannot provide things that are in increased demand," said Boris I. Sedov, a trade official. "And if we could, the speculators would immediately buy them and start selling them at black market prices."

The correspondent argued that the Soviet consumer industry should try to meet the demands of teen-agers for "fashionable goods because after all not everything fashionable is bad."

He noted that Odessa is not the only black market centre and that he could have made his report from nearly any city, "including my native Moscow."

Views Sought on Car Seats for Tots

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1973 41
FOURTH SECTION

A little "write-up" about a traffic accident and the interest of a Toronto housewife have lead to a national campaign to set government standards for children's car seats.

Because the accident caused Toronto's 100th traffic fatality that year, 1970, the death of a three-month-old baby in a minor mishap warranted a little more-than-usual attention by the newspaper.

The housewife was Mrs. Joy Moon who read the article and "just became interested" in the matter of children's safety while riding in cars.

AUTO SAFETY

In the intervening three years, Mrs. Moon has become the Consumer Asssociation of Canada's national convenor for child auto safety and the chairman of a Canadian Standards Association subcommittee which will set regulations for children's safety seats when all the research is in.

Mrs. Moon is also working on a local initiative grant to prepare information and collect more information on the subject.

The LIP project brought Mrs. Moon to Victoria Wednesday.

PRICE NO GUARANTEE

"I'm here to get your views, too," she told a meeting sponsored by the local CAC branch. "I find conditions and concerns are different across the country."

"Price is no guarantee that a seat will provide adequate protection for children when a car is in collision," she said.

To representatives of local police departments who attended the meeting, she said: "I know it bothers me, as it must bother you, when I see a car go by and a child's face is pressed against the window. If the driver stops suddenly you know what's going to happen.

There are no manufacturers working on developing designs for plastic safety seats for children right now," she told a representative from the Capital Regional Safety Council.

CAC's goals are to ensure safe car seats through federal legislation, raise public interest in car safety for children, pressure stores into handling proven safe seats — there are only two, Mrs. Moon says — and to broaden research into the area.

Mrs. Moon feels progress is being made — slowly.

The two proven seats — General Motors Infant Safety Carrier for babies to 20 pounds and the Ford Tot-Guard for children to six years — have the basic designs from which others will be developed.

Interim legislation has curbed the sale of some devices that are clearly not as safe as advertised.

And there is public concern: "Just one story (about the campaign) brought in 150 letters to the government, people demanding something be done . . . People are more concerned about the safety of their children than price."

Troubled Ship Coming

A crew from CFB Esquimalt is standing by in Halifax to bring the trouble-plagued destroyer-escort Restigouche back for service on the west coast.

A year after the completion of her $12.5 million modernization job she is almost ready to complete the sea trials.

A defence department spokesman said Tuesday the government is spending about $750,000 to repair the corrosion damage caused by acid used to clean her steam turbine system.

LIMPED HOME

The Restigouche limped back from sea trials about a year ago after she lost power. The investigation that followed showed the damage was a "carryover" of hydrocholoric acid.

She will replace HMCS Qu'Appelle, which is expected to leave for Halifax in May.

The $750,000 estimate for repairing Restigouche's damage was given in a Commons return Monday in answer to questions from Douglas Rowland (NDP—Selkirk), the NDP defence critic.

10-YEAR LIFE

The defence department said Tuesday that the estimate is about the same as the one given when it was decided it was worthwhile to repair the 15-year-old ship rather than scrap her.

Repaired and modernized, she is considered to have 10 or more years of life left.

She is one of four Restigouche class ships built in the 1950s that have been brought up to date with the addition of variable depth sonar, advanced electronic equipment and a rocket-boosted torpedo known as AS-ROC.

Three other vessels of the same class have yet to be converted. Another Restigouche class ship is HMCS Terra Nova, now part of the Canadian contingency evacuation plan in Vietnam.

The armed forces uses such ships on the west coast because there are no facilities here for the helicopters carried on the more modern anti-submarine vessels.

Drunk Driving: $1 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Increased law enforcement and more public education are needed if there is to be any headway against the most commn killer of young adults, says research scientist Dr. Arthur Peart.

He was speaking in an interview Tuesday about drunken drivers, blamed for 2,750 deaths each year in Canada, 90,000 injuries and a $1 billion drain on the economy.

Dr. Peart, head of the Traffic Injury Research Foundation in Ottawa, said one million hospital beds are needed each year to accommodate traffic injuries related to drinking and driving.

The drain on the economy in terms of lost income, sickness and disability is staggering, he said.

"The ages chiefly affected among drivers killed are those between 25 and 35 years of age. Very close behind them are the 16-to-25 age group, then the 35-to-45 age group.

"Unfortunately the young people, the 16-to-35 age group, when they are most productive and have young families, are the hardest hit."

NEW BOAT RAMP at Island View Beach in Central Saanich is under construction, being financed by a Local Initiatives Program grant of $12,000. The ramp, being built entirely by hand by boating enthusiasts in the area, is expected to extend about 150 feet in order to clear a sand bar and allow for the extreme tides in the area. AN ERROR IN JUDGMENT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver-area court clerks rose to the top very quickly last week when they were appointed provincial court judges by mistake.

Roy Pettit, 36, and Pat Dickie, 38, were correctly named in a provincial government order-in-council as court administrators in Surrey and Matsqui respectively.

But the form letters sent out officially notifying them of the appointments were those intended for new judges.

When officials phoned from Victoria to correct the mistake, Pettit had a member of his staff take the call and say: "I'm sorry. Judge Pettit cannot be disturbed now. He's sitting on a robbery case."

Pettit said the silence on the Victoria end of the call was shattering.

He said the government has since sent the correct forms.

Immigrant Rights Curtailed

EDMONTON (CP) — Landed immigrants resident in Alberta will be classified as "non-residents" if they wish to buy trust company shares under a government bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday.

The bill also authorized Alberta trust companies to borrow money by the issue of debentures. Under the bill, they would also be able to make government-guaranteed loans without other security.

A second bill, also given first reading, will permit partnerships of doctors, lawyers or chartered accountants to have more than 20 members. The current act restricts partnerships to fewer than 20 members.

The trust companies amendment act, said Attorney-General Merv Leitch, who introduced the bill, will strengthen the position of Alberta's financial institutions.

It states that non-resident status under the act is extended to persons who are "ordinarily resident in Canada, but not a Canadian citizen."

Under the present law, only persons who are not ordinarily resident in Canada are classified as non-residents.

Non-residents may not hold more than 25 per cent of the shares of a provincial trust company.

The bill also says that provincial trust companies may borrow money by the issue of debentures, provided such an issuance is approved by the shareholders and the government's director of trust companies.

In addition, a trust company would be able to lend its own funds and deposits and investment revenue without other security if the loan is guaranteed by either the federal or any provincial governments or a foreign government where the company is licensed to do business.

'Picture' Your Woodland From Sunrise to Sunset

If you are blessed with a piece of woodland property and still wonder how to make "improvements," look at it now in spring, carefully, with the intention of noticing everything.

See the picture at sunrise, noon and at sunset. Notice how trees change their characters with varying lights; and notice the shadows.

You have dogwoods in bloom? You have an arbutus? Douglas firs? These are trees your relatives in other parts of Canada would pay money for if they could grow them in that climate.

Are there all kinds of intriguing small plants now growing in the woods debris with beautiful leaf designs and tiny flowers? And perhaps the larger shrubs you recognize as salal and Oregon-grape?

Before you take a mattock to clean out the "mess" take yourself on a visit to one of the local Nature Sanctuaries such as Thetis Park.

There you may have the good fortune to come across Freeman King or one of his trained young workers — nature lovers all in most practical ways, living with the wild life of the area on a day-to-day basis.

You will gain knowledge of what you have on your own property, and with the knowledge will grow respect. Out of that emerges, in a remarkably short time, an abiding love for the native plants in their own environent.

The word "simple" occurred to the mind in connection with "native" but what is simple about a trillium flower and its propagation, or an erythronium, the so-called Easter-lily?

These should be the two most treasured of our local spring flowers, yet are undoubtedly disappearing. Very soon they will be seen only in sanctuaries, conserved there by the efforts of such dedicated outdoors people as Mr. King and his workers.

A home in a woodland setting of a half-acre will have the charm of a much larger property if native material is carefully exploited. Brightly flowered introduced plants will look out of place, though related species to native genera may well find a home.

Assuming that the soil structure has not been drastically damaged and altered during construction of the home, the smaller native plants may be moved around and others brought in. Care is needed to avoid an appearance of striving for effect. This is why you need to study your piece of wild land at all hours and, if you can wait, at all seasons.

Only then will you clear out the unnecessary or the useless, because you discover the use and need of underbrush to the small creatures you hope to retain.

Native berrying shrubs and seeding grasses provide food and shelter for resident and migratory birds which in turn aid in keeping control on other less desirable wildlife.

The web of life, one strand depending on all the others, thus unfolds in believable sequence as you look long and carefully at your piece of woodland in spring.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There is the story of the husband and wife who were playing as partners. During a deal, the wife made a couple of horrible bids. At the conclusion of play, he upbraided her unmercifully. She burst into tears.

The husband then said, "My dear, I think that before we play bridge again, you should take some lessons."

The wife, still crying, replied: "Play bridge again! I'll never play bridge with you again!"

The husband answered softly: "That would be the next best thing."

A classic husband-wife deal is the one that follows. In it, the husband was the one who was in need of bridge lessons. And I'm sure that if they're still playing as a partnership, the husband took some lessons. The hand arose in a small-stake rubber-bridge game against another husband-wife partnership. The unknowing husband was sitting in the North seat.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	Pass (!)	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

South's two-heart opening was, of course, forcing to game. Evidently the husband knew that the bid was forcing, for he made the conventional negative response of two no-trump. But when his wife rebid the heart suit, the husband thought that he had already fulfilled his duty by having kept the bidding opened. So he passed.

As is evident, Ruth had a sure small slam in her hand going in; and, as the cards were divided, a grand slam would have been there for the taking, with dummy's nine of hearts serving as an entry for the taking of a successful club finesse.

Again, the failure to reach a small-slam contract must be placed squarely on North's shoulders, with South being absolved of any guilt. Whenever one opens with a strong two bid in a suit, that call is forcing until at least a game is reached (unless the opponents are doubled en route, for penalties).

Over three hearts, North should have bid three no-trump, as a second negative bid. South would then have concluded that North did not possess the club king; and she then would have bid either six hearts or six notrump.

Minister Freed

PRAGUE (AP) — David Hathaway, a British non-conformist minister from Yorkshire, was expelled Monday from Czechoslovakia after serving 10 months of a two-year prison term. Hathaway was arrested in July, 1972, when customs guards found undeclared religious literature in East European languages in his luggage as he tried to enter Czechoslovakia.

Airport Expropriation Hearings 'Misleading'

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Transport Minister Jean Marchand said Tuesday he is not satisfied with legislation governing airport expropriation proceedings and stated it should be changed to allow government representatives to answer questions about proposed developments.

He told a House of Commons committee that the government created a false impression with the public about the nature of expropriation hearings under the legislation.

This became clear, he said, during the controversies surround the proposed Vancouver International Airport expansion and the new airport which is planned for Pickering outside Toronto.

Marchtand stated that although in the eyes of the public, expropriation hearing officers should be impartial and accept evidence from both objectors and govenment departments planning projects requiring expropriation, the act stipulates that the officers can only listen to objections and report them to the minister.

He said that Sea Island residents expressing objections to the proposal to construct a new runway at the Vancouver airport had a false impression of what was involved in the hearings which preceded the government's decision last month to confirm expropriation of properties involved.

He said that no matter how the expropriation procedure is altered, it must be the government, and not some impartial third body, which makes the final decision on whether planned projects shall go ahead.

Questioned by John Fraser (CP—Vancouver South) Marchand said at the committee meeting that the Environment Department, which is conducting an environmental impact study into the Sea Island expansion, can't technically stop it.

The federal government, meanwhile, has been waiting for "many months" to hear from Premier Dave Barrett whether the B.C. government will share in the cost of the Hudson Street Bridge to serve Vancouver airport.

But with or without a provincial government contribution, the bridge will be completed within two years, Marchand said.

HELICOPTER CRASH KILLS THREE

PAVILION, B.C. (CP) — Three men were killed in a helicopter crash Tuesday near this community 200 miles northeast of Vancouver.

Dead are Ian Wright, 32, of Mission, the pilot, and two B.C. Forest Service rangers, Reginald Hamblin, 49, of Kamloops and Donald Wood, 37, of Lillooet.

The men were inspecting high tension power lines when a rotor blade hit one of the wires. The helicopter apparently burst into flames almost immediately.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver city council Tuesday aproved a 1973-74 budget totalling $102 million, with a mill rate of 15.6. It's the city's first budget of more than $100 million.

Salmon Dispute Unsettled

OTTAWA (CP) — The government apparently is waiting to see what action, if any, United States fisheries officials take in a dispute over salmon-fishing rights off the west coast.

A spokesman for Environment Minister Jack Davis, asked Tuesday whether the minister would have any statement, said only: "Mr. Davis will not be commenting on the differences at this point."

The "differences" arose at a four-day meeting that ended Saturday in Washington which dealt with reciprocal salmon rights off Vancouver Island and Washington State.

The U.S. state department said Monday the U.S. proposed the salmon fishing privilege be deleted, but the Canadian delegation argued it should be retained. It was decided to leave the matter for another conference scheduled early next month, to be devoted to "a much broader range of matters."

The decision, said the state department, "left unsettled various other issues of importance regarding the fisheries on both the Atlantic and Pacific."

"Though prospects appeared good for satisfactory solution of many of these problems, final decisions could not be reached at this time and must await the outcome of possible future discussions."

No Pay Cut for Illness

The legislature Tuesday accepted a Social Credit amendment to exempt MLAs from a $100 sessional allowance deduction for absence from the house if they are away because of illness.

The New Democratic Party's bill amending the Constitution Act increased the deduction to $100 a day from $12 a day and increased the radius of the place where the MLA must be in hospital to 50 miles from the legislative buildings from the former 10-mile limit.

James Chabot (SC — Columbia River) charged this was favoritism in that it takes in all the NDP members from the lower mainland area and discriminated against members from rural ridings.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said the amendment was introduced to allow an ailing MLA to get the finest medical treatment available when the house is sitting.

The government then accepted an amendment from Chabot allowing an MLA to be exempt from any deduction wherever he may fall ill.

In other debate on amendments to the act, Dr. Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) opposed the section allowing the government to appoint a 23-member cabinet. He said for a province the size of B.C. to have a cabinet just six members smaller than the federal cabinet would be absurd. Dr. McGeer then accepted Hall's assurance that the government has no intention of increasing the size of the cabinet to 23.

Longing for a smile from a loved one gone.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Teens Rarely Use Precautions

I just read in a release from the Planned Parenthood-World Population News service that a study was made of 2.4 million never-married teen-aged girls in the United States, all of whom had had sexual intercourse. The researchers, Johns Hopkins sociologists John F. Kantner and Melvin Zelnik, found that more than half of the girls (1.3 million) did not use any method of contraception.

The girls studied were between the ages of 15 and 19, and what is astounding is that fewer than one in 10, or about 200,000 of the girls had used the reliable medical methods such as the pill, IUD or a diaphragm. Nearly four in 10 relied on withdrawal, douching, rhythm, or over-the-counter methods like foam and condoms.

In questioning the girls further, the researchers found that only 16 per cent never used contraception but just 19 per cent report always using a contraceptive method. The doctors concluded that the use of contraception tends to be erratic and often unreliable among the teen-agers because of the episodic and sometimes unanticipated nature of teen-age sex.

Also, the younger the teen-ager, the more likely she is to go without contraception. About one-third of the 15-year-olds never used contraception, while only 12 per cent of the 19-year-olds had never used contraception.

One advantage of using condoms is that they can help to avoid venerel disease.

COUTURE PATTERN

By LOIS HOLMES

Cover-up toppers are at the top of the list in every fashion category but none is as strikingly beautiful as those that can be made by hand.

Gorgeous snowflake squares are delightfully easy to make and are joined as you work. A big crochet hook and four-ply yarn help you to create a charming masterpiece in no time. Add or subtract the squares for the length of your personal needs. Nothing is more magnificent than the snowflake coat in full maxi length.

The companion tailored knit topper, shown above, is also one that can be made in any length for an excellent go-everywhere coat. The great ribbed collar has a deep point in the back for a distinct designer detail to further accent the smart cuffed sleeves and single huge pocket.

Both toppers are perfect for the new layered look, easy to wear with ample allowance for individual tastes. Four-ply yarn is also used and sizes small, medium and large are all given for each garment.

To order: 354-586 Snowflake and Tailored Toppers, send $1.50 in U.S. funds plus 15 cents for mailing for the pattern (25 cents for air mail) in cheque or money order to Lois Holmes of California, (Victoria Times), Box 1005, Gardena, Calif. 90249.

Please print your name, address, and pattern number plainly.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Inventor of the Hovercraft Now Quietly Rages at World

SOUTHAMPTON, England (Reuter) — From the windows of his modest house, Sir Christopher Cockerell watches the big ships go by and quietly rages at bureaucrats and small-thinkers.

Occasionally his eyes light up and he points with his pipe at a passing hovercraft. For Sir Christopher invented the hovercraft, hailed by many as the most significant development this century in marine transportation.

Today, at the age of 62, he is mostly shunned by the industry he founded. A series of policy disagreements forced him to quit first as technical director and then as consultant to the government financed Hovercraft Development Ltd.

Since the final link was severed almost three years ago, Sir Christopher has retreated to his home in the village of Hythe, overlooking Southampton Water, gateway to this major British port.

He has built a workshop-laboratory next door. And there he is working on what may be the next breakthrough in hovercraft—a propulsion system that would permit the building of giant hover-liners.

GIVES FEW DETAILS

He is reluctant to give details of his latest work. But he says it is recognized that air propellers, although adequate for the present comparatively small hovercraft, would not be suitable for a transatlantic craft.

"You couldn't make them big enough. You can't get hold of enough air to push it along. So you've obviously got to go to water propulsion to propel the air cushion."

Asked when he expects to produce results, he says: "I hope to get something running this year."

Even so, he is pessimistic about the outlook for British hovercraft.

"In another 10 years we will be buying hovercraft from the Americans and spending precious foreign exchange," he says.

In the late 1950s, when his idea for ships and even land vehicles travelling on a cushion of air was the hottest thing around, Sir Christopher (then plain mister—he was knighted in 1969) regularly rebuffed approaches from overseas, including the United States.

Now, he admits, the politics and the constant battle for research funds have exhausted him.

But he still feels stirred to action over such matters as the high-speed hovertrain project, recently axed by the British government, and the Channel tunnel from England to France, whose prospects have increased in recent years.

He sees the hovertrain cancellation as an attempt to turn back history and the tunnel fervor as "pedestrian thinking . . . simply no imagination."

When he first got the hovertrain notion moving, in 1961, Britain was far ahead in this field, he says. But the government-supported development made slow progress.

The United States, France, West Germany and Japan stepped in and were making good progress, and the hovertrain "is going to come."

"In 1910 they had 100-mile-an-hour trains, so nothing has happened. You've got to do a breakthrough, not fiddle about with a few miles an hour. Something that really rips. Throw away all the existing stuff and start afresh."

Sir Christopher vainly wrote letters in support of the hovertrain project and he is worried that his voice will be similarly ignored over the Channel tunnel. The concept is limiting, he feels. Nobody considers what the problems will be 100 years from now, when a tunnel might be totally inadequate for the traffic.

Northern Indians Vow to Halt N.W.T. Pipeline

OTTAWA (CP) — Indians in the Northwest Territories will seek other means to stop construction of the proposed gas pipeline in the Mackenzie Valley if the courts lift the current land freeze, the Commons northern affairs committee was told Tuesday.

James Wha-Shee, president of the N.W.T. Indian Brotherhood, said northern Indians consider themselves owners of the 400,000 square miles covered by a temporary freeze granted by the territorial court.

Until the federal government enters negotiations and settles the Indian claims, the Indian brotherhood will continue court action to stop the pipeline, he said.

Mr. Wah-Shee said treaties 8 and 11 signed by territorial Indians were in fact peace treaties and not land settlements.

"It is clear from the research we have done with approximately 30 of our elders who were present that they never intended to cede or surrender any land," Mr. Wah-Shee said.

Verbal explanations given to the Indians varied from the written treaties and there also is a question as to the authenticity of some of the signatures, he said.

REFUSED DISCUSSION

Mr. Wah-Shee said Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien "had adamantly refused to sit down and seriously discuss with us the possible terms, timetable, and budget for researching our proposed land settlement."

Mr. Wah-Shee said it will take the Indians about 20 months after they receive research grants to be prepared to negotiate.

Until then, he said, the Indians will oppose any further transfers of Crown land in the N.W.T.

Both cash and land would be asked by the Indians to extinguish their claims, he said.

Mr. Wah-Shee said his presentation to the Commons committee was an attempt "to gently explode the great Canadian myth of the northern dream."

"This dream is false because the premise is faulty; Canada does not own the Northwest Territories and no amount of political, economic or resource expediency will move us, the owners of the land, at a pace faster than we are prepared to go."

Mr. Wah-Shee also denied statements that Indians living in settlements along the proposed Mackenzie highway want the roadbuilt.

If the minister or others consulted northerners, the consultations were with "the Elks, the Canadian Legion or the Daughters of the Midnight Sun," he suid.

The Indian leader also said the movement of the territorial government from Ottawa to Yellowknife to bring it closer to the people had failed.

Although natives were a majority of territorial residents, very few Indians or Eskimos were involved in decision-making.

The territorial government was a colonial administration and Indians resented the idea that Ottawa had given it responsibility for treaty Indians.

Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) said he understood that the powers of the territorial government presented problems to Indians there.

But that was no reason for Mr. Wah-Shee to use "inflamatory words" that could only worsen the situation.

Mr. Wah-Shee also told the committee that it was his opinion that the Indian health department was using sterilization as part of government policy to control native population in the North.

FRENCH CHURCH APPROVES ISRAEL

PARIS (CP) — The French Roman Catholic Church has issued a document urging an end to anti-Semitism and indirectly approving of the creation of the state of Israel.

The document tells Roman Catholics:

"The Jew merits our attention and our esteem, often our admiration, sometimes our friendly and brotherly criticism but always our love.

"It is perhaps what he has missed most and that in which Christian conscience has been the most guilty."

The document is entitled Pastoral Orientations on the Attitude of Christians Toward Judaism.

It was drawn up by a study group of bishops, and formulated in the context of a 1965 declaration by the second Vatican ecumenical council. That declaration absolved Jews from guilt in the death of Jesus Christ.

The French Roman Catholic document was welcomed by the chief rabbi of France, Jacob Kaplan, as "a great act by the church toward which Judaism is greatly sensitive."

It urged the Christian faithful to fight the perpetuation of anti-Semitic characterizations of the Jew as "a usurer, ambitious, conspiratorial and . . . a deicide."

The document, mindful of the Vatican's refusal to recognize Israel since it was created 25 years ago, skirted delicately around the issue and did not use the word Israel.

But it said:

"Universal conscience cannot refuse to the Jewish people, who have suffered so many vicissitudes throughout history, the right and the means to a political existence of their own among the nations."

$20 Family Allowances In Welfare Overhaul

OTTAWA (CP) — A rise in average family allowance payments to $20 a month per child has been proposed to the provinces in a federal government working paper tables in the Commons today.

The proposal is part of an over-all model for an overhaul of the welfare system.

Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde is due to meet with his provincial counterparts next week for discussions on a general revamping of welfare plans.

The 14-point model presented by Lalonde also would make the allowances taxable.

Lalonde set the increase in family allowances and changes in the Canada Pension Plan as immediate priorities in the overhaul.

The increase in family allowances is expected to raise net costs of the plan by about $800 million a year, boosting present gross costs to $1.8 billion.

Among other proposals made by the government are:

An income supplement with built-in work incentives for working poor whose incomes are inadequate by reason of family size or by reason of their kind of employment.

A guaranteed income program for people who are unable to work or who are not expected to work, including the retired or disabled, single parent families and persons who are not employable.

OLD AGE SECURITY

Acceptance of the old age security program as a base upon which a further guaranteed income plan can be built for the aged.

A last-resort income program to meet special situations of people who will not be covered under other income supplements.

A social and employment services plan to provide training, counselling and child-care needs.

Authority allowed the provinces to set their own levels of income guarantees and supplements and vary the amount of allowances paid under federal programs.

Establishment of a community services employment program.

That the approach to an overhaul of welfare programs be worked out within two years and a target date be set for implementation within three to five years.

The family allowance plan would be universal and is expected by the government to benefit all but thhose persons in high income levels.

The proposed plan represents a change from the ill-fated Family Income Security Plan introduced in the Commons last year.

That plan, which never received third reading due to the election call last summer, would have paid benefits graduated according to income.

The government hopes after discussion with the provinces that the family allowance amendements can be implemented in January.

The working proposals offered by the government also favor full escalation of pension benefits under the Canada Pension Plan, with the escalation relating to the consumer price index.

Maximum pensionable earnings by 1975 will be increased to $7,800 if the federal proposals are accepted.

FIGHTING FLARES ACROSS VIETNAM

Times News Services

SAIGON — Fighting increased today in all four military regions of South Vietnam after a two-day lull, especially in the region surrounding Saigon.

North Vietnam claimed the air raids killed several civilians in Communist-controlled areas of the country.

In Cambodia, President Lon Nol announced the resignation of his entire cabinet Tuesday night in a move to "strengthen national unity."

But there was no sign of a let-up in fighting or U.S. bombing in the country.

Meanwhile, in Washington, a House subcommittee meeting in a closed session has voted to give President Nixon an additional $150 million to carry on the war in Indochina until June 30.

Reds Right: Choppers Off Course

By JAMES ANDERSON
Times Correspondent

PHU BAI, South Vietnam — "I didn't want to believe it but now I'm sure," says Capt. Ray Parsons. "The helicopters were off course."

Capt. Parsons was one of two Canadians who survived 10 days ago when two International Commission of Control and Supervision helicopters were shot down over Communist territory in sorthern South Vietnam.

Since the return of an ICCS investigating team from the area last week, Capt. Parsons has become absolutely convinced that the area examined and photographed by the team was the same place where he landed on April 7.

"They (the Viet Cong) let us take a few pictures of the crash," he said. "Just comparing the photographs yesterday, there's no question in my mind that it's the same location.

"They haven't moved anything or touched anything."

Canadian Capt. Charles Laviolette and eight others were killed when the first of two ICCS helicopters on the ICCS mission was destroyed by a Viet Cong missile.

Capt. Parsons and Master Cpl. Robert Laplante were aboard a second helicopter, which was hit by Communist fire but landed without injury to the 10 passengers and crewmen.

But American charter service pilots of the second helicopter have told the press they are certain they were on course.

Capt. Parsons was shielded from the press until he had given his evidence before the ICCS investigation team in Hue Monday.

I interviewed him Tuesday at Phu Bai, the ICCS sub-regional headquarters to which he is assigned, six miles south of Hue and 50 miles east of the crash site.

The captain dismissed news reports that the wreckage of the helicopter might have been moved. He said the evidence was so conclusive that he did not feel there was any need for the survivors to revisit the crash site.

His opinion, according to informed sources in Saigon, is supported by Canadian experts in photo-analysis, who have examined with great care the two sets of photographs taken by the survivors and the investigation team.

The same conclusion — that the helicopter was off course — was reached by all eight ICCS investigators when they went to the crash site last week.

The wreckage was located almost exactly where the Viet Cong said it was, some 15 miles from the air corridor through which the ICCS helicopters had been promised safe passage.

Some news reports from Saigon have quoted American sources as claiming they have evidence that the wreckage of the helicopters was moved. A senior American analyst who believes the story listed his evidence in Saigon.

It consisted of:

The presence in the general area of a Soviet-made MI-6 heavy-lift helicopter, large enough to have picked up the downed UH-1 "Huey" in which Parsons and the other survivors landed.

Air photos showing "a controlled ground fire" in the safe-passage corridor which the analyst believed was used to clear vegetation to allow collection of wreckage.

IT'S MEAT, IT'S BEANS ... IT'S SUPERBURGER!

OTTAWA (CP) — Superburger, a mixture of hamburger and soybean protein, was offered in a supermarket here Tuesday and sold well.

Composed of 75 per cent ground beef and 25 per cent soybean protein, the hybrid sold for 59 cents a pound compared with 83 cents a pound for regular hamburger.

A week ago, a health department spokesman said changes in the food regulations were being studied to permit the addition of plant protein to meat products.

This would bring Canadian rules in line with United States regulations, which were changed earlier this year.

Federal health officials launched an investigation into Tuesday's sales, and they issued a statement that they would take no action to stop the sale of superburger.

Regulations are being drafted to control labelling and nutritional content of such mixes.

Jean-Paul Joanisse, owner-manager of the store which was handling the new product, said it "was selling very well" and he tried it for supper Monday night. It tasted like hamburger, he said.

BCR Books Questioned

Outside auditors were restricted on how far they could go in auditing B.C. Railway books, the provincial comptroller-general has informed the government.

And J. W. Mintey urged an immediate stocktaking of operating materials and the follow-up on this and the matter of unclaimed payroll cheques.

Premier Barrett Tuesday filed Minty's report in the legislature which charged poor accounting and engineering practices under the former Social Credit government.

At the same time Barrett said that an outside engineering firm will be engaged "to review contract-letting practices" of the railway. Also, an outside accounting firm has been appointed to review problems raised in Minty's report.

When the two reports are completed, all material will be forwarded to the legislature's public accounts committee for review and study in the fall session.

Barrett also confirmed an earlier statement about division of responsibilities at the railway's top management level. Joe Broadbent is to continue as vice president of the railway and will supervise the railway's development aspects. Mac Norris is promoted to vice-president in charge of operations.

Barrett told the house that Minty's study of the railway's accounting procedures "leaves some unanswered questions." As a result, the railway's board of directors decided on the course of action it chose, he said. (Barrett is president of the BCR.)

In a covering letter to Barrett when his report was submitted, Minty said he and his staff had worked at the BCR's Vancouver offices during the first three weeks of March of this year.

"With respect to the awarding of contracts for rail line extensions, I confirm that the company's officials have seen fit to limit spending on preliminary engineering studies, a practice which has directly contributed to overruns in the order of $17 million on contracts completed to date," he wrote in the letter.

In the report, Minty specifies that Einar Gunderson, former Social Credit cabinet minister and executive vice-president of the railway, "restricted the extent to which the external auditors could go in their auditing with a consequent limitation of fees charged." He recommended that the auditors "should not be unduly restricted . . . as appeared to be the case in the past."

Among Minty's other recommendations:

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A rail car assembly shop creating almost 200 jobs will be constructed by the British Columbia Railway at Squamish and will begin operations in January, 1974, Premier Dave Barrett announced in the legislature Tuesday.

Barrett said $5 million has been allocated for the project.

At peak capacity, the plant will be able to produce four railway cars daily.

Barrett told reporters after he made the announcement in the house the steady demand for steel which will result from the car assembly plant will make it "feasible" for the government to consider a steel plant for British Columbia.

PARNTERNSHIP

He said the government is interested in a partnership with a private company for construction of a steel mill, and added that he will discuss such a project with European interests on his trip to Europe in May.

Barrett said a combination of factors led to the BCR's decision to build a rail car assembly plant. One factor, he said, is the severe shortage of rail cars in the province.

The premier said the railway has ordered 500 boxcars from other manufacturers, with 100 cars due to arrive in B.C. within a week. In order to relieve the pressure caused by the car shortage in the interior and northern parts of the province, the Canadian National Railway has agreed to release some of its cars to the BCR, Barrett said.

Barrett made the statement to the house in his capacity as president of the government.

NEWS BRIEFS

Prime Rate Hiked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three of the largest banks in the U.S. Tuesday boosted their prime rate a quarter point, only a day after the administration told banks that interest rates for large business loans could rise with other money market rates if small business and consumer loan rates are restrained.

New Raids Likely

BELFAST (UPI) — Army sources said today British troops were planning new raids in Catholic areas of Northern Ireland in an attempt to "smoke out" gunmen of the militant provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army before the May 30 municipal elections.

Exit Tax Lifted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union today notified the United States it has "suspended" its exit visa tax on citizens — including Jews — seeking to emigrate to other countries.

Second Storm

DACCA (AP) — The second major windstorm in a week has struck central Bangladesh. First official reports reaching Dacca said at least 100 persons were feared dead.

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Western powers were reported split today on a resolution amounting to partial sanctions against Israel for last week's commando raid on guerrilla centres in Beirut.

U.S. Suspends Oil Quotas

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today suspended all oil import quotas and lifted tariffs on oil in an effort to meet an "energy challenge" that he said threatens to blossom into an "energy crisis."

In a 19-page message to Congress, Nixon also called for elimination of price regulations on newly-discovered natural gas, a step he said would increase the cost to industry and the consumer but would encourage development of new supplied.

In the message, he came out strongly against the proposed Canadian pipeline for Alaskan oil but left the way open for such a project if a trans-Alaska pipeline continues to be delayed in the courts.

"I oppose any further delay in order to restudy the advisability of building the pipeline through Canada. Our interest in rapidly increasing our supplies of oil is best served by an Alaskan pipeline," the president said.

Meanwhile, bitter independent gasoline dealers were closing their stations in some parts of the United States Tuesday as major companies hoarded depleted supplies for their own outlets.

The gasoline shortage, triggered by the heating fuel crisis last winter, was further aggravated by a spate of refinery shutdowns on the Texas Gulf coast.

CZ Profits Up 144% For Quarter

VANCOUVER (CP) Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. has reported a record in sales and earnings, the latter up 144 per cent, for the first three months of 1973.

The company's first-quarter report, released Tuesday, shows sales of $69.6 million, 35 per cent better than the first three months of 1972.

President Robert G. Rogers attributed the record to "unusual" conditions in which world markets for wood products and pulp and paper were strong at the same time.

Net income was $6.1 million, compared with $2.5 million for the corresponding period last year. Share income was 76 cents a share, compared with 31 cents a year ago.

CS Bargaining Rights Detailed

Legislation to give collective bargaining rights to the province's 31,000 civil servants was introduced today.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall introduced the Public Service Labor Relations Act but told the house it is the government's intention to hoist the bill this session and reintroduce it at the fall session.

During the interim period, Hall said temporary wage increases will be negotiated. Advisory committees will be set up to represent the various groups within the civil service to bargain with the government.

Under the terms of the legislation, the province's civil servants will be divided into three bargaining units.

One will consist of the registered nurses and psychiatric nurses working. Hall said it is likely that an amalgamated form of the two unions operating in this area will become the bargaining agent for this group.

The second group will consist of the licensed professionals working in the civil service. Representation of this bargaining unit will likely be a combination of a number of existing groups, Hall said.

The third and largest group will be the general employees not included in the other two categories. Hall said the B.C. Government Employees Union will likely be certified as the bargaining agent for this group.

All employees included by the legislatkon will have the full right to strike, Hall said. There is also provision for voluntary referral of a dispute to a board of arbitration, which would make a binding decision.

Employees excluded from the provisions of the legislation include those working for a crown corporation B.C. Hydro, B.C. Rail, the proposed Insurance Corporation of B.C., the Energy Commission, and the B.C. Development Corporation along with employees of the Workmen's Compensation Board, Queen's Printer and the B.C. Institute of Technology.

Also excluded are employees who have not been on the job for a total of 30 days, confidential employees in management positions and personnel officers.

Hall said provisions of the legislation regarding technological change are "the most progressive in the country."

The legislation stipulates that the government is to give notice of its intention to introduce new technology and that collective bargaining is to take place on the effects of that change within two weeks of the notice being given.

Two Teachers Await Appeal

Greater Victoria school board's appeal of a board of reference decision reinstating two teachers who were fired last summer has been delayed several months.

Meanwhile the two teachers, Miss Bona MacMurchie and Miss Evelyn Ball, are still not working and have had no income for over a year.

They were dismissed by Greater Victoria school board on July 15 for "neglect of duty," but appealed to a three-man provincial board of reference, which ruled they should be reinstated Oct. 4.

The school board immediately decided to appeal the decision and said the pair would not be rehired until the appeal is heard.

The appeal was scheduled to be heard this week but school board lawyer Brian Smith said procedures for the appeal must be established first.

SET RULES

He said both sides must first appear before the B.C. Court of Appeal to determine whether new evidence can be taken at the appeal hearing or whether the appeal will simply review evidence already taken at the board of reference hearing.

Smith said the school board will argue that new evidence should be allowed, but it may be a couple of months before they can appear before the court.

The two teachers, Miss MacMurchie at Margeret Jenkins Elementary and Miss Ball at Lampson Street Elementary, were fired after being absent from their teaching duties for most of the 1971-72 school year.

ON DOCTOR'S ORDER

In outlining the circumstances of the incident, the board of reference said the two women, who live together, were ill with influenza for several weeks and consulted their doctor who told them they should go to Arizona.

The two left for Phoenix on Nov. 9, 1971, and returned to Victoria last August.

The board of reference, made up of a B.C. Teachers' Federation representative, a B.C. School Trustees' Association representative and a lawyer, said they were satisfied the teachers took their doctor's advice seriously, that the women were ill during the entire time of their absence, and that "if a teacher is ill to the extent of being unable to perform teaching duties, then such a teacher is not required to apply for a leave of absence."

Lloyd MacKenzie is counsel for the teachers and the BCTF is paying legal costs incurred by the two women.

Miss MacMurchie, who has taught for Greater Victoria school board for over 30 years, says she and Miss Ball are "just working around the house doing gardening."

She said they have had no income since their sick leave ran out over a year ago while they were still in Phoenix.

VICTORIA ON FILM

A series of half-hour television shows depicting elements of Victoria from a community-oriented point of view will be aired by Cable 10 Television for six weeks starting April 26 at 10 p.m.

The shows are produced by a $27,000 Local Initiatives Project called The Videosyncrasy Association which started two months ago.

Anne Bayin, a spokesman for the 12-member association, said the series will depict the community in "the broadest sense of the word."

The producers, she added, will also draw from community video-tapes the association has made since January — tapes including activities of Victoria Community School and the Victoria Women's Centre.

The grant was awarded the association to provide a community video-tape service accessible for training and education of community group members.

Death of a Hamburger Crime of the Century

The mother of a disgruntled teen-ager in Gravesend, England, has put the girl on a week-long diet, using the wartime British ration, to show the young lady how lucky she is to be living in this day of unrestricted food supplies.

That is as much of the brief item on the CBC news that I remember, but I expect every parent of my vintage, especially those who were in Britain in the war years and with a memory of how good those three eggs a week used to taste, or that occasional rasher of bacon or the once-a-month roast, will be applauding. "That'll show the rotten kid what we went through," they'll be saying.

You'll be wondering, I suppose, what this has to do with my subject today, which concerns my search for a real, old-fashioned hamburger, but I want to make the point that the young person of today knows deprivation of a kind that, even in the darkest years of the war, we simply never had to endure. The young person of today, to get right down to it, has simply never tasted a genuine hamburger and is never likely to. It is one of the great scandals of our times.

For better than two months now I have carried out a systematic survey of the hamburger outlets of these climes, notably the chain-owned drive-ins that claim it as a specialty. My original intention was to list these places by name and to provide a detailed, analytical, ingredient-by-ingredient autopsy on their hamburgers. I have now abandoned that notion as too repetitive since each of these hamburgers — 16, to be precise — were all but identical in content and all but identical in taste, namely unbelievably awful.

It is not a nice thing to do — and may permanently ruin your appetite for the rest of your life — but I have looked under the hide, so to speak, of these test hamburgers and have found a truly frightful mess of pickle, relish, mayonnaise, tomato and lettuce. In the case of the two leading franchise outlets there is an extra mysterious ingredient, possibly patented, which I strongly suspect to be LePage's Library Paste.

In each case, as well, there has been a token wafer of the material from which the hamburger gets its name. The coroner's report is not yet in, but the circumstantial evidence suggests that this membrane may actually contain some form of meat product or derivative, such as leather, but since it has been grilled to the consistency of Naugahide its taste does not intrude on the lettuce, relish, etc.

In those distant days when the hamburger was a truly noble creation, before it became the Firenza of short order specialties, it consisted of exactly four ingredients.

There was an enormous slab of the meat, itself, a thick hoop of succulent Spanish Onion, a smear of mustard and, of course, the bun lightly toasted on the griddle. If someone then had asked for relish or lettuce or anything else that might bruise the heavenly collaboration of beef and onion he would have been killed dead on the spot. No jury would have found for anything but justifiable homicide.

★ ★ ★

One hotly-debated variation of this combination was pioneered by the Tomahawk Drive-In, on Marine Drive in North Vancouver, where the owner-chef, Chic, was not merely widely known for his hamburgers, but revered. Chic had a back-room counter for customers who had demonstrated their loyalty, an honor only slightly less sought-after than the Order of the British Empire. Chic had shaken the very foundations of the hamburger world by substituting mushrooms for the Spanish Onion, but since this was before the day when modern science had totally removed the taste from the mushroom the innovation was condoned and eventually accepted.

What seems clear is that the franchise sellers, who have been so relentless in ruining the pleasures of casual, simple food, have had their way with the hamburger. Clearly their cost accountants discovered very early that the profit could be put into the hamburger by simply removing the meat and substituting garbage and that the profits, when put into slick, high-pressure advertising, would bring in the adolescent customer who knows no better.

The result we all know. The hallowed hamburger of the past is dead, but they will not let it rest in peace.

Community Rallies When Trap Springs

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Blair Peden, 23, of 4929 Prospect Lake Road, has found his dog — dead.

She was in a camouflaged grave on a neighbor's property, shot and bearing the vicious marks of a spring trap.

The University of Victoria student's dog had been missing since April 2.

A friendly 20-month-old German Shepherd cross, Chinook was well known to neighbors. They helped Peden search for her. Peden inserted newspaper ads offering a reward. He had notices posted at the local store.

One of Peden's neighbors, Ted Hart of 4915 Prospect Lake Road, discovered the grave.

"It was really hidden," he said, "covered over with grass clippings, garden refuse and pine boughs."

Saanich police were called in. Indignant members of the Prospect Lake Community Association gathered at Hart's house. An autopsy was carried out on Chinook by Dr. A. J. L. Bonnell.

Hart, Peden and others said the trap had been set about 60 feet from the road on unfenced property and baited with a dead bird.

Dr. Andy Kerr, PLCA vice-president and father of three small children, said this kind of trap also could injure small children.

"Children can't read No Trespassing signs any better than dogs can," he observed. "This kind of trap could wreck a child's arm or leg."

Policemen agreed that the type of trap is dangerous in a built-up area like Prospect Lake where dogs and children roam freely.

They said they had "suggested" to the man who had laid the trap (to catch raccoons that threatened his poultry) that he use the more humane "live" trap.

They pointed out, however, the trap-setter was within his legal rights to set them on his own property and there was no law that required a more humane type of trap.

They told Peden and his neighbors the dog had been shot because the trapper and a friend had felt she was too far gone to recover when they found her.

But Dr. Bonnell said the autopsy indicated she would have been "treatable".

On Monday Peden buried Chinook in the shady spot where she used to wait for his return from university.

But the PLCA will push for legislation that will stop the risk of the same thing happening to children and other pets. After an emergency meeting, president Jack Whitehead said "We're not going to let this thing just slide by."

He said the executive decided not to hold a public meeting so "tempers could cool off a bit" but members will ask Mayor Hugh Curtis to work for better legislation.

They will also rally behind Garde Gardom (Liberal-Vancouver-Point Grey) in his efforts to get a private member's bill passed, restricting the use of spring traps.

Sex Shop Nix Almost Sure

Kelly Covin of Ultra-Love Products Ltd., of Vancouver, has applied for a business licence which has been directed to the city's finance committee for consideration Thursday because of its controversial nature.

The company is inviting applications for franchises in the Victoria area, but one member of city council, who did not want to be named, said approval of a business licence was unlikely, because the operation was deemed "inappropriate."

Asked by reporters if he thought a neignboring municipality would promptly approve such a business, he said Victoria could do without the trade.

Covin says stores selling Ultra-Love goods, which range from water beds through sensuary stimulation equipment to contraceptives, are open in Vancouver, New Westminster, Calgary, Edmonton and Toronto.

In his application, Covin says Victoria police looked at his catalogue and advised that it is against federal law to sell contraceptives.

The information "will probably come as a shock to the companies advertising on radio station CJVI and in the business personals columns of the daily newspapers," said Covin of Durrance Road in the Victoria area.

(Contraceptive companies have also placed display advertisements in Victoria daily papers.)

"Nevertheless we will scratch the contraceptives part of the catalogue and not sell or advertise them," Covin said, adding that as new products and lines were introduced they would be cleared with both police and city council.

"Our intention is to cooperate every step of the way for several reasons, not the least of which is to avoid any possibility of hassle."

The company's illustrated catalogue, which has circulated in a brown paper envelope among city officials for several weeks, lists among its products such items as Orgy Cream, Intimate Hair Oil, Cupid's Quiver, Emotion Lotion and Love Jell in lemon, green-grape, strawberry and peach.

When they approved a store in Vancouver, city officials described Ultra-Love as "... an enterprise that specializes in space-age sexual technology, including water beds, incomprehensible elastic contrivances and mysterious balms."

Diphtheria Strikes Two More

Two new cases of diphtheria have been confirmed in Greater Victoria, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said today.

Both patients, a man and a young girl, are in hospital and in good condition, said the senior public health officer for Greater Victoria.

But they underline again the need for parents to make sure their children have been immunized.

A public health immunization program is available through well baby clinics for infants and school children receive booster shots where parents grant permission. The program covers about 80 per cent of children.

Whitbread said where parents know their children have not been immunized or are uncertain, further information is available from the clinics operated by the metro health board throughout the region.

The clinics and their phone numbers: Victoria at 385-3351; Saanich at 386-3251; Oak Bay at 598-3311; Langford at 478-1757; Sooke at 642-3122; Sidney at 656-1188 and Ganges on Salt Spring Island at 537-5424.

Unequal Treatment Of Women Cited In BCTF Report

By LINDA HUGHES, Times Staff

It extends to the "policies and attitudes of the Department of Education, the BCTF, the local school boards and individual teachers," the 15-page report says.

The report, presented to the BCTF executive by the four-woman task force headed by Campbell River Senior Secondary School vice-principal Dorothy Glass, and just made public, contains an analysis of the status of women in B.C. education and makes 46 recommendations to improve the status.

"As teachers," the task force reported, "we are part of an education system which supports and maintains the status quo by inculcating values that perpetuate rigid role differences.

"Children are taught society's concept of what is masculine and feminine. Prescribed textbooks and other school literature provide socially acceptable models which stress qualities of independence and leadership for boys and dependence and passivity for girls.

"It is no wonder then," the report continues, "that female teachers being products of this same educational system should tend to under-estimate their human potential and ability to act on it."

The report says there are only 83 women among the provinces 1,223 principals and head teachers.

Full-Time Guardian

There are 75 district superintendents and 61 instruction directors in the province and none of these top supervisory positions are filled by women.

While women form the majority of teachers in the province (53 per cent), the ratio of men to women in the BCTF executive is 10-to-1 and men outnumber women 74 to nine in the position of local teacher association president.

The major recommendation of the report, which will go to a vote at the BCTF annual convention next week, urges that a BCTF member be appointed biennially "to work full time towards an improvement of the status of women in the government of the federation and in education in B.C."

It points out that, from information gathered in 47 school districts, women outnumber men 25-to-1 in primary education, while men outnumber in secondary education.

"Children should be exposed to teachers of both sexes at all levels of education," says the report, adding that women choose primary education more often because of "previous motivational conditioning".

"Some men have expressed a desire to work in the primary area," the report says, "but have been discouraged from doing this,."

Ransacking Labelled 'Cover Job'

Whoever broke into Can-Am Investigations Ltd., overnight Monday was looking for confidential information not cash, manager John Dewar said today.

The firm's 3,000 confidential files were scattered about the ransacked office at 483 Burnside but none were missing. Spent flashbulbs were found in a filing cabinet.

"The point was not to take the files but to photograph them," said Dewar. "It looks like a cover job."

The offenders had two choices, says Dewar. They could have carefully picked the locks on the doors, photographed the files, and left the office tidy.

They chose the second method. The office was ransacked and a small amount of cash was stolen, making it look like a normal robbery. Dewar's convinced it was a professional job.

Fingerprints were taken by a Victoria police identification officer and Can-Am's own fingerprint man

"We're eliminating the staff and clients who have been in for legitimate reasons," said Dewar.

The company has been working on several marriage of convenience cases, concerning illegal immigrants into Canada, as well as insurance frauds.

Sooke Park Enlarged

The Capital Regional District has purchased for $123,000 two more parcels of waterfront land for East Sooke Park.

The purchase, announced Tuesday, will allow visitors to walk five miles along a natural scenic coastline.

A 110-acre tract was bought from Fred King of Calgary. It includes half a mile of waterfront, coves, benchlands and scenic Beechey Head on the east side of the park.

The district also acquired Iron Mine Bay and property immediately behind it from Mrs. M. R. May of California. It includes 800 feet of waterfront and a small island.

Amount paid for each of the parcels was not disclosed.

Oak Bay mayor Frances Elford, chairman of the regional parks committee, said the region now has a park unique and "far superior to any in the Greater Vancouver metropolitan area."

"It is the largest waterfront park on the east coast of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands," she said. "It is only a half-hour drive from a population of 200,000."

She said visitors can now walk from Iron Mine Bay on the west wing of the park to Aylard farm on the east side, a distance of five miles. Aylard farm was purchased last year.

What Kind of a Critter Is It?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

When is a boat not a boat?

Bert Buchanan's Limpet was dreamed up by Bill Garden, well known marine architect whose headquarters is at Toad's Landing near Sidney.

But North Saanich authorities aren't convinced the Limpet is a sea creature. In fact, municipal inspector of services T. A. Crack has posted a stop-work order on Buchanan's dream boat, now partially built on his Lochside Drive property.

Buchanan said Tuesday the inspector has now asked for plans of the Limpet in order to determine what sort of creature she actually is — land or marine.

Garden, who is known throughout North America for both his traditional and advanced boat designs, said the Limpet is capable of becoming a summer home on land and water; she is a houseboat that can be taken ashore at the whim of her owner.

With an 11½-foot beam, the 24-foot craft draws 2½ feet. She can be powered by a 10-horsepower outboard or towed. Adjustable legs allow her to be beached readily, even on uneven ground.

Hewett says one of her greatest advantages is she can be built and equipped with drapes, carpets, chemical toilet, sink and other necessities for less than $1,000.

"She's a very inexpensive living capsule and her adjustable legs are not really that new. Many years ago some sailboats had legs screwed on to their bottoms."

The Limpet's frame is plywood and cedar, her roof is fiberglass and her doors will be aluminum. Completed, she'll weigh in at about 1,500 pounds, well under the 3,500 flotation capacity of her four styrofoam blocks.

Buchanan — if and when the stop-work order is lifted — has asked North Saanich council for six months grace in which to finish building his unconventional craft.

An avid sailor, he owns the 25-foot sloop Laurig Ghru. Buchanan hopes to anchor or beach the Limpet in some of the many Gulf Island spots he's become familiar with.

He and Hewett see the Limpet design as a means of beating the high costs of materials and labor for those who want to combine land and sea living in their leisure hours.

As Hewett says, "After all, there's no law I know that demands a boat has to be seaworthy enough to go to Hawaii!"

When the stop-work order was first imposed, Buchanan was told North Saanich council would deliberate on the problem Monday night.

Instead, he says, he was informed Tuesday that it would be treated as an "internal matter" by municipal officials.

$20 Family Allowances In Welfare Overhaul

OTTAWA (CP) — A rise in average family allowance payments to $20 a month per child has been proposed to the provinces in a federal government working paper tabled in the Commons today.

The proposal is part of an over-all model for an overhaul of the welfare system.

Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde is due to meet with his provincial counterparts next week for discussions on a general revamping of welfare plans.

The 14-point model presented by Lalonde also would make the allowances taxable.

Lalonde set the increase in family allowances and changes in the Canada Pension Plan as immediate priorities in the overhaul.

The increase in family allowances is expected to raise net costs of the plan by about $800 million a year, boosting present gross costs to $1.8 billion.

Among other proposals made by the government are:

An income supplement with built-in work incentives for working poor whose incomes are inadequate by reason of family size or by reason of their kind of employment.

A guaranteed income program for people who are unable to work or who are not expected to work, including the retired or disabled, single-parent families and persons who are not employable.

OLD AGE SECURITY

Acceptance of the old age security program as a base upon which a further guaranteed income plan can be built for the aged.

A last-resort income program to meet special situations of people who will not be covered under other income supplements.

A social and employment services plan to provide training, counselling and child-care needs.

Authority allowed the provinces to set their own levels of income guarantees and supplements and vary the amount of allowances paid under federal programs.

Establishment of a community services employment program.

That the approach to an overhaul of welfare programs be worked out within two years and a target date be set for implementation within three to five years.

The family allowance plan would be universal and is expected by the government to benefit all but those persons in high income levels.

The proposed plan represents a change from the ill-fated Family Income Security Plan introduced in the Commons last year.

That plan, which never received third reading due to the election call last summer, would have paid benefits graduated according to income.

Persons claiming the children as dependents will be expected to declare the payments as part of their income.

The government hopes after discussion with the provinces that the family allowance amendements can be implemented in January.

The working proposals offered by the government also favor full escalation of pension benefits under the Canada Pension Plan, with the escalation relating to the consumer price index.

Maximum pensionable earnings by 1975 will be increased to $7,800 if the federal proposals are accepted.

FIGHTING FLARES ACROSS VIETNAM

Times News Services

SAIGON — Fighting increased today in all four military regions of South Vietnam after a two-day lull, especially in the region surrounding Saigon.

North Vietnam claimed the air raids killed several civilians in Communist-controlled areas of the country.

In Cambodia, President Lon Nol announced the resignation of his entire cabinet Tuesday night in a move to "strengthen national unity."

But there was no sign of a let-up in fighting or U.S. bombing in the country.

Meanwhile, in Washington, a House subcommittee meeting in a closed session has voted to give President Nixon an additional $150 million to carry on the war in Indochina until June 30.

By JAMES ANDERSON
Times Correspondent

PHU BAI, South Vietnam — "I didn't want to believe it but now I'm sure," says Capt. Ray Parsons. "The helicopters were off course."

Capt. Parsons was one of two Canadians who survived 10 days ago when two International Commission of Control and Supervision helicopters were shot down over Communist territory in sorthern South Vietnam.

Since the return of an ICCS investigating team from the area last week, Capt. Parsons has become absolutely convinced that the area examined and photographed by the team was the same place where he landed on April 7.

"They (the Viet Cong) let us take a few pictures of the crash," he said. "Just comparing the photographs yesterday, there's no question in my mind that it's the same location.

"They haven't moved anything or touched anything."

Canadian Capt. Charles Laviolette and eight others were killed when the first of two ICCS helicopters on the ICCS mission was destroyed by a Viet Cong missile.

Capt. Parsons and Master Cpl. Robert Laplante were aboard a second helicopter, which was hit by Communist fire but landed without injury to the 10 passengers and crewmen.

But American charter service pilots of the second helicopter have told the press they are certain they were on course.

Capt. Parsons was shielded from the press until he had given his evidence before the ICCS investigation team in Hue Monday.

I interviewed him Tuesday at Phu Bai, the ICCS sub-regional headquarters to which he is assigned, six miles south of Hue and 50 miles east of the crash site.

The captain dismissed news reports that the wreckage of the helicopter might have been moved. He said the evidence was so conclusive that he did not feel there was any need for the survivors to revisit the crash site.

His opinion, according to informed sources in Saigon, is supported by Canadian experts in photo-analysis, who have examined with great care the two sets of photographs taken by the survivors and the investigation team.

The same conclusion — that the helicopter was off course — was reached by all eight ICCS investigators when they went to the crash site last week.

The wreckage was located almost exactly where the Viet Cong said it was, some 15 miles from the air corridor through which the ICCS helicopters had been promised safe passage.

Some news reports from Saigon have quoted American sources as claiming they have evidence that the wreckage of the helicopters was moved. A senior American analyst who believes the story listed his evidence in Saigon.

It consisted of:

The presence in the general area of a Soviet-made MI-6 heavy-lift helicopter, large enough to have picked up the downed UH-1 "Huey" in which Parsons and the other survivors landed.

Air photos showing "a controlled ground fire" in the safe-passage corridor which the analyst believed was used to clear vegetation to allow collection of wreckage.

IT'S MEAT, IT'S BEANS ... IT'S SUPERBURGER!

OTTAWA (CP) — Superburger, a mixture of hamburger and soybean protein, was offered in a supermarket here Tuesday and sold well.

Composed of 75 per cent ground beef and 25 per cent soybean protein, the hybrid sold for 59 cents a pound compared with 83 cents a pound for regular hamburger.

A week ago, a health department spokesman said changes in the food regulations were being studied to permit the addition of plant protein to meat products.

This would bring Canadian rules in line with United States regulations, which were changed earlier this year.

Federal health officials launched an investigation into Tuesday's sales, and they issued a statement that they would take no action to stop the sale of superburger.

Regulations are being drafted to control labelling and nutritional content of such mixes.

Jean-Paul Joanisse, owner-manager of the store which was handling the new product, said it "was selling very well" and he tried it for supper Monday night. It tasted like hamburger, he said.

BCR Books Questioned

Outside auditors were restricted on how far they could go in auditing B.C. Railway books, the provincial comptroller-general has informed the government.

And J. W. Mintey urged an immediate stocktaking of operating materials and the follow-up on this and the matter of unclaimed payroll cheques.

Premier Barrett Tuesday filed Minty's report in the legislature which charged poor accounting and engineering practices under the former Social Credit government.

At the same time Barrett said that an outside engineering firm will be engaged "to review contract-letting practices" of the railway. Also, an outside accounting firm has been appointed to review problems raised in Minty's report.

When the two reports are completed, all material will be forwarded to the legislature's public accounts committee for review and study in the fall session.

Barrett also confirmed an earlier statement about division of responsibilities at the railway's top management level. Joe Broadbent is to continue as vice president of the railway and will supervise the railway's development aspects. Mac Norris is promoted to vice-president in charge of operations.

Barrett told the house that Minty's study of the railway's accounting procedures "leaves some unanswered questions." As a result, the railway's board of directors decided on the course of action it chose, he said. (Barrett is president of the BCR.)

In a covering letter to Barrett when his report was submitted, Minty said he and his staff had worked at the BCR's Vancouver offices during the first three weeks of March of this year.

"With respect to the awarding of contracts for rail line extensions, I confirm that the company's officials have seen fit to limit spending on preliminary engineering studies, a practice which has directly contributed to overruns in the order of $17 million on contracts completed to date," he wrote in the letter.

In the report, Minty specifies that Einar Gunderson, former Social Credit cabinet minister and executive vice-president of the railway, "restricted the extent to which the externai auditors could go in their auditing with a consequent limitation of fees charged." He recommended that the auditors "should not be unduly restricted . . . as appeared to be the case in the past."

Among Minty's other recommendations:

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A rail car assembly shop creating almost 200 jobs will be constructed by the British Columbia Railway at Squamish and will begin operations in January, 1974, Premier Dave Barrett announced in the legislature Tuesday.

Barrett said $5 million has been allocated for the project.

At peak capacity, the plant will be able to produce four railway cars daily.

Barrett told reporters after he made the announcement in the house the steady demand for steel which will result from the car assembly plant will make it "feasible" for the government to consider a steel plant for British Columbia.

PARNTERNSHIP

He said the government is interested in a partnership with a private company for construction of a steel mill, and added that he will discuss such a project with European interests on his trip to Europe in May.

Barrett said a combination of factors led to the BCR's decision to build a rail car assembly plant. One factor, he said, is the severe shortage of rail cars in the province.

The premier said the railway has ordered 500 boxcars from other manufacturers, with 100 cars due to arrive in B.C. within a week. In order to relieve the pressure caused by the car shortage in the interior and northern parts of the province, the Canadian National Railway has agreed to release some of its cars to the BCR, Barrett said.

Barrett made the statement to the house in his capacity as president of the government.

U.S. Suspends Oil Quotas

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today suspended all oil import quotas and lifted tariffs on oil in an effort to meet an "energy challenge" that he said threatens to blossom into an "energy crisis."

In a 19-page message to Congress, Nixon also called for elimination of price regulations on newly-discovered natural gas, a step he said would increase the cost to industry and the consumer but would encourage development of new supplies.

In the message, he came out strongly against the proposed Canadian pipeline for Alaskan oil but left the way open for such a project if a trans-Alaska pipeline continues to be delayed in the courts.

"I oppose any further delay in order to restudy the advisability of building the pipeline through Canada. Our interest in rapidly increasing our supplies of oil is best served by an Alaskan pipeline," the president said.

Meanwhile, bitter independent gasoline dealers were closing their stations in some parts of the United States Tuesday as major companies hoarded depleted supplies for their own outlets.

The gasoline shortage, triggered by the heating fuel crisis last winter, was further aggravated by a spate of refinery shutdowns on the Texas Gulf coast.

CZ Profits Up 144% For Quarter

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. has reported a record in sales and earnings, the latter up 144 per cent, for the first three months of 1973.

The company's first-quarter report, released Tuesday, shows sales of $69.6 million, 35 per cent better than the first three months of 1972.

President Robert G. Rogers attributed the record to "unusual" conditions in which world markets for wood products and pulp and paper were strong at the same time.

Net income was $6.1 million, compared with $2.5 million for the corresponding period last year. Share income was 76 cents a share, compared with 31 cents a year ago.

CS Bargaining Rights Detailed

Legislation to give collective bargaining rights to the province's 31,000 civil servants was introduced today.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall introduced the Public Service Labor Relations Act but told the house it is the government's intention to hoist the bill this session and reintroduce it at the fall session.

During the interim period, Hall said temporary wage increases will be negotiated. Advisory committees will be set up to represent the various groups within the civil service to bargain with the government.

Under the terms of the legislation, the province's civil servants will be divided into three bargaining units.

One will consist of the registered nurses and psychiatric nurses working. Hall said it is likely that an amalgamated form of the two unions operating in this area will become the bargaining agent for this group.

The second group will consist of the licensed professionals working in the civil service. Representation of this bargaining unit will likely be a combination of a number of existing groups, Hall said.

The third and largest group will be the general employees not included in the other two categories. Hall said the B.C. Government Employees Union will likely be certified as the bargaining agent for this group.

All employees included by the legislatkon will have the full right to strike, Hall said. There is also provision for voluntary referral of a dispute to a board of arbitration, which would make a binding decision.

Employees excluded from the provisions of the legislation include those working for a crown corporation — B.C. Hydro, B.C. Rail, the proposed Insurance Corporation of B.C., the Energy Commission, and the B.C. Development Corporation — along with employees of the Workmen's Compensation Board, Queen's Printer and the B.C. Institute of Technology.

Also excluded are employees who have not been on the job for a total of 30 days, confidential employees in management positions and personnel officers.

Hall said provisions of the legislation regarding technological change are "the most progressive in the country."

The legislation stipulates that the government is to give notice of its intention to introduce new technology and that collective bargaining is to take place on the effects of that change within two weeks of the notice being given.

Two Teachers Await Appeal

Greater Victoria school board's appeal of a board of reference decision reinstating two teachers who were fired last summer has been delayed several months.

Meanwhile the two teachers, Miss Bona MacMurchie and Miss Evelyn Ball, are still not working and have had no income for over a year.

They were dismissed by Greater Victoria school board on July 15 for "neglect of duty," but appealed to a three-man provincial board of reference, which ruled they should be reinstated Oct. 4.

The school board immediately decided to appeal the decision and said the pair would not be rehired until the appeal is heard.

The appeal was scheduled to be heard this week but school board lawyer Brian Smith said procedures for the appeal must be established first.

SET RULES

He said both sides must first appear before the B.C. Court of Appeal to determine whether new evidence can be taken at the appeal hearing or whether the appeal will simply review evidence already taken at the board of reference hearing.

Smith said the school board will argue that new evidence should be allowed, but it may be a couple of months before they can appear before the court.

The two teachers, Miss MacMurchie at Margeret Jenkins Elementary and Miss Ball at Lampson Street Elementary, were fired after being absent from their teaching duties for most of the 1971-72 school year.

ON DOCTOR'S ORDER

In outlining the circumstances of the incident, the board of reference said the two women, who live together, were ill with influenza for several weeks and consulted their doctor who told them they should go to Arizona.

The two left for Phoenix on Nov. 9, 1971, and returned to Victoria last August.

The board of reference, made up of a B.C. Teachers' Federation representative, a B.C. School Trustees' Association representative and a lawyer, said they were satisfied the teachers took their doctor's advice seriously, that the women were ill during the entire time of their absence, and that "if a teacher is ill to the extent of being unable to perform teaching duties, then such a teacher is not required to apply for a leave of absence."

Lloyd MacKenzie is counsel for the teachers and the BCTF is paying legal costs incurred by the two women.

Miss MacMurchie, who has taught for Greater Victoria school board for over 30 years, says she and Miss Ball are "just working around the house doing gardening."

She said they have had no income since their sick leave ran out over a year ago while they were still in Phoenix.

VICTORIA ON FILM

A series of half-hour television shows depicting elements of Victoria from a community-oriented point of view will be aired by Cable 10 Television for six weeks starting April 26 at 10 p.m.

The shows are produced by a $27,000 Local Initiatives Project called The Videosyncrasy Association which started two months ago.

Anne Bayin, a spokesman for the 12-member association, said the series will depict the community in "the broadest sense of the word."

The producers, she added, will also draw from community video-tapes the association has made since January — tapes including activities of Victoria Community School and the Victoria Women's Centre.

The grant was awarded the association to provide a community video-tape service accessible for training and education of community group members.

Men's Lib 'Lagging'

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (AP) — The most important distinction between women's liberation and men's liberation is awareness, according to Wayne Johnson, director of the student development program at Temple University in Philadelphia.

"Women's lib, through its determination and hard work, has become widely recognized in North America, but on the other hand, hardly anyone has heard of men's lib," Johnson said.

"Women are quicker to recognize their entrapment and do something about it. The very fact that men are still largely unaware that they are trapped is proof of the need for men's lib."

Stages Viewed

Johnson's students examine the various images of the North American male which have been carefully nurtured in film and literature — recognizing them as among the sources of male entrapment.

The 22 male and 12 female undergraduates in his class see a different film every Friday, and discuss it the following Monday and Wednesday.

"Like women, men tend to act out the roles they feel are expected of them," Johnson explained, "and too often they take their cues from films or literature.

"Most of the stereotyped images are well known.

"To begin with, there's the 'machismo' or 'cave-man' image of hairy virility that many men have come to accept as a personal standard. It's prominent in both the films and literature of North America.

Old Standard

"For a good many men, 'Me Tarzan — You Jane' ranks as the ultimate in communication between the sexes.

"Countless men were conditioned in the old days to believe that the true measure of a man was his ability to smash a rival with one blow of his mighty fist, or to beat him to the draw and fill him full of lead," said Johnson.

"Of course this conditioning continues to shape men's desires — if not their actual lives. Tarzan has been joined by John Wayne, Burt Lancaster and a host of growling he-men types on the screen, while our literature has become not only more violent than ever, but erotic as well."

Johnson feels there is nothing more pathetic than the frustration of a middle-aged man who is ridden by subconscious fantasies and yearnings that he is unable to reconcile himself to his existence.

"His frustrations make his life completely devoid of meaning and often drive him to emotional excess such as alcoholism," Johnson said.

"This comes about because men have not yet learned to recognize their entrapment and to cope with it.

"Through the continual barrage of advertising from all sides, men are taught never to be content with what they have but always to want more.

Material Badge

Material goods are equated with masculinity and the ability to acquire them becomes a badge of virile superiority, he said.

"The man, sensitive to the pressures, is faced with a choice: either he goes into debt and saddles himself with a burden he can barely carry, or he must reconcile himself to the humiliation of seeing his wife and children deprived of the glittering array of merchandise the hucksters are pandering.

By analyzing the nature and the sources of the pressures on the American male, we can help him to deal with his life situation constructively. We will teach men to rid themselves of the false standards which have become a part of the North American scene and to recognize the true value of themselves as human beings, completely independent of what Madison Avenue and Hollywood think they should believe."

Babysitting Agency May Close, Provincial Tax Demands Cited

By NICOLE STRICKLAND

There is some danger that the only remaining babysitting agency in Victoria will soon be closed down.

Elenor Millar, owner of the Victoria Babysitting Agency, says that the provincial government threatens to tax the agency out of existence, and that under their demands, she can no longer afford to keep the service running.

"The person who sold me the agency last June had to close it down because she had a system where she billed the customers and then paid the sitter, and sometimes could not collect her billings.

"Under my system, the sitter collects the fee directly after each job, and pays me 85 cents each time she babysits. Now the provincial government tells me that I cannot legally collect agency fees from the sitter according to the Employment Agencies Act — that I have to bill the parents. The taxation department tells me I have to pay the girls' Canada Pension, UIC, and income tax, and I just can't afford that, since it will mean twice the book work."

CASUAL WORKERS

Mrs. Millar's sitters, because they are considered casual labor, charge the customer $1 an hour, paying the agency 85 cents a job whether they sit for four hours or ten hours.

"There is another problem," says Elenor Millar. "Not all my girls remit the 85 cents per job, and I find I'm not making anything from the agency."

It would seem that the problem hinges upon whether the provincial government views Mrs. Millar's agency as a job-finding agency or an employment agency — the definition of each affecting the tax structure.

LOAN TAKEN

"The Better Business Bureau went to bat for me saying there was no reason why I couldn't be considered as a job-finding agency instead of an employment agency, and Allan MacKinnon has asked me to put my problem in black and white so he could take it to the federal minister of finance to get me some tax relief, but nothing has happened yet. As it is, I have to go out on babysitting jobs myself just to meet the bills."

The business cost $3,000 to by ("far too much," Mrs. Millar now admits), and Mrs. Millar pays $75 a month on her bank loan to reduce that debt. Postage and sometimes even long distance phone calls are an expense in checking out sitters' references.

License fees for the city, Saanich, and the provincial government cost $90 a year when added up. There is a $40 yearly charge for membership in the Better Business Bureau. Mrs. Millar pays $70 a month for her business telephone, her ad in the yellow pages, and her telephone answering service.

"If I am financially unable to help myself, then I'd like to get a government subsidy to keep the agency going. Failing this, I'd like to turn it outright over to the government and ask them to pay my salary to keep it going.

"Employing good, qualified babysitters (all must receive marks of at least 80 per cent on Mrs. Millar's competence test for entry to the job, as well as having to enrol in training sessions) is my first concern, so that parents needn't worry while they're away.

"There's a definite need for this type of service in Victoria. We get about 100 calls a month for sitters, and that doesn't include the number of calls we get from people asking for advice with a child-rearing problem.

'NO BREAKS'

"One of the things bothering me is the stranded young mother with children too young to qualify for subsidized day care centres. She might like to return to work or have the occasional day off but who cannot even afford our rate of $1 an hour. She's entitled to the break from her children, but without a government subsidized babysitting agency, it's impossible.

"I think there is a great need for drop-in centres that would complement day care for children, so that the parent could drop his child off for an hour or two of playing with other children while the parent took a break.

"I've just written to Human Resource minister Norman Levi about having to close down the agency if I can't get some tax relief, and I certainly hope he can do something, not just for me, but for all those young mothers and the women we employ who depend on us."

No Hammer Blows Seen for School

South Park School is expected to be preserved as "an outstanding example of early Victorian architecture."

Greater Victoria school board heard a letter Monday night from then-city manager Bill Hooson informing the board the Victoria Downtown Business Association has suggested the building be preserved.

Before the city's land-use planning committee pursued the matter, Hooson wrote, they wished to know what the board intended to do with the school.

The board agreed to advise the committee "that the board plans to utilize South Park for education purposes for the foreseeable future, and would not object in principle to action which would preserve it as an example of early Victorian architecture."

"But final approval," the board motion read, "would be subject to clarification of the intent of the proposal."

South Park is one of two elementary schools in James Bay and the school board plans to consolidate all students in an enlarged James Bay Elementary School.

South Park School was built in 1896.
